Federal Reserve Advises.
Everybody Bought.
Russia Answers the Pope.
Poor Gentle Gandhi.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, March 22.

Excellent advice. Business will advise the Federal Reserve, when and if prosperity booms again, to be less enthusiastic about promoting usury, and run the Federal Reserve more like a banking institution, less like a pawnshop.

RESERVE BOARD financiers that forced 15 and 20 per cent interest rates, handing hundreds of millions to money lenders and adding billions in value, temporarily, to inflated bank stocks, need advice as much as any business man needs it.

LOS ANGELES' oil-scandal-bribery case seems to have been a complete job. One lady on the jury confesses that she was promised $20,000. A male juror admits that interested parties bought his house for about twice what he paid for it. But he never thought of corruption. Other jurors were bought or "got" in other ways. But to make doubly sure, these accused bought the district attorney, and he, for a wonder, is in jail.

THE good people of Los Angeles were spending thousands on the law suit, trying to punish crime and get justice for those swindled in the oil robbery. And the accused sat before a partly bought jury with an entirely bought district attorney prosecuting.

JOSEPH TOPLITZKY, student of modern conditions, says "If a man is guilty, he should go into court, since he is quite sure to win. But if he is innocent, he will make the best settlement he can, he would not have much of a chance."

RUSSIA, inflamed by the Pope's protest against atheistic propoganda, retaliates, in vindictive fashion. In the Minsk district a fund is started to build an airplane, presumably for war, to be called "Our Answer to Pope Pius." And from the Veronesh district, workers send to the industrial fund at Moscow ten carloads of church bells, sacred images, crucifixes, etc., to be melted down. That shipment is called "An Answer to the Pope."

ONCE, such a service as that held in St. Peter's by the Pope, answered in such fashion by Russia, would have started a crusade against the Russian government. The masses move more slowly now, but there is no doubt that Russia is building up ill-will, most foolishly, not only abroad, but more particularly among her own people.

POOR, gentle, sincere Gandhi, leader of the Hindu rebellion, continues his pathetic march to the sea. His plan is to manufacture salt, without paying the usual tax, and see what Britain does. He tells his followers, "If you are sent to prison, go piously, if assaulted bear it, cheerfully, if shot, die peacefully."

THAT accords with our Christian "turn the other cheek" command, but it is not the program of victory nor the method that has secured freedom for the oppressed in America, France, Russia or anywhere.

GOLF links, daily dozens, radio setting up exercises and other devices are designed for the man who leads a sedentary life PHYSICALLY. Edison wants to know "what about the man mentally sedentary and inactive? Who will plan something for him?" Many millions need to be called early on the radio with this question: "How long is it since you have exercised your mind? How much reading worth while do you do, and how much do you think as you read?" It is mental, not physical inactivity, that hurts a nation.

MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, of Brooklyn, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, is not worried about prohibition. She says the Eighteenth amendment, giving ice water to men, will stay in the constitution as long as the Nineteenth amendment, giving votes to women.

PROHIBITION, in the constitution, will undoubtedly outlive this century, barring a workers' revolution, which won't come. But souvent femme varie, "often woman changes her mind," is true, and women themselves may change laws made to enforce and interpret the Eighteenth amendment. They may say that half of one per cent alcohol is too much, or decide that beer used by many, temperately, and wine, made by divine miracle for the marriage feast, may be used.

NEW ZEALAND women were as ardent for prohibition as Mrs. Boole, and they closed all the saloons. After they had lived with their husbands for a while, each husband with a bottle under his mattress, they voted the saloon in again.

THE Union Pacific Railroad has bought $500,000 worth of fine new motor omnibuses. Railroad men have passed the phase of contempt for automobiles. The Union Pacific will use 22 new omnibuses between Chicago and Los Angeles, 11 between Portland, Spokane, Boise and Salt Lake City.

MANY more railroad omnibuses will be bought, when railroad flying machines carry all the long distance passengers, and buses carry most of the short haul.

MAN VICTIM OF COLD WAVE

Found Frozen in West End Camp as Mercury Drops To 17 Degrees in District

One man was frozen to death and the entire Pittsburgh district shivered today from a sudden cold snap that sent the thermometer tumbling to 17 degrees.

The weather will continue below the seasonal normal tomorrow, according to Forecaster W. S. Brotzman, although there will be a slow rise in temperature.

COLD SUDDEN

The cold wave which struck the city late yesterday, gained in intensity as the thermometer slumped rapidly through the night and early morning hours today.

Out in Boxtown, where a colony of hoboes live in packing cases and piano boxes along the Banksville road, West End, one of the members was found at 7:30 this morning, frozen to death. All that his buddies knew about him was that he called himself Stanley Lepinsky, and that he was about 60 years old.

GLOOM ALONG ROW

Although fruit growers throughout Allegheny County had feared the effect of the sudden freeze, a checkup showed that little damage had been done.

PARTY SLATE UPSET BY GRUNDY

Lewis Running His Campaign And I'm Directing Mine,' He Is Quoted at Capital

Senator Joseph R. Grundy upset Pennsylvania political calculations when he denied yesterday, according to report, the existence of a Grundy-Lewis ticket, on which his candidacy to succeed himself was linked with that of former State Treasurer Samuel S. Lewis for governor.

Grundy was quoted from Washington as stating "There is no such thing as a Grundy-Lewis ticket: Lewis is running his own campaign and I am running mine."

The statement was attributed to Grundy after he had talked with Lewis. The latter conferred with Grundy in Washington, but denied a report that he had offered to withdraw his candidacy for Governor.

COMPROMISE HINT SEEN

Grundy's remarks made a profound impression in political circles and were interpreted as opening the door to a compromise with members of the Philadelphia political "war board."

Many of the well-informed believed Grundy might try to effect an agreement that would eliminate, not only Lewis, but also Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, who is a candidate for Senator on a ticket with Francis Shunk Brown, of Philadelphia, for Governor.

Such an agreement, they declared, would provide a harmony

BLONDE ASKS NEW TRIAL MONDAY

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 21.—Irene Schroeder faces death with her head up.

The first woman ever doomed to the electric chair in Pennsylvania occupies a cell in the Lawrence County jail today awaiting the next move of her attorneys—the filing Monday of a motion for a new trial—to save her from paying the supreme penalty for the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, of the state highway patrol, in a gun battle on the New Castle-Butler road last December 27.

Snarling defiance to the world and heatedly rejecting the sympathy of faithful relatives, "Iron Irene," taken back to her cell after hearing her doom pronounced, turned for solace alone to W. Glenn Dague, her sweetheart companion.

JESTS WITH DAGUE

"How are you feeling, Glenn?" she called down to the cell beneath hers.

"I'm all right; how are you?" Dague replied.

"I'm feeling fine—they can't scare me."

Then, jokingly:

"Come on up."

"I can't."

"Well, go to bed then, you devil."

Today, the blonde trigger woman sits stolidly behind bars displaying the same defiance that flashed from her eyes last night as 10 men and two women solemnly acknowledged the death sentence carried in their verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

EYES FLASH DEFIANCE

Her eyes flashed with the same defiance that characterized her capture after a futile attempt to shoot it out with posses in the Arizona desert; the same defiance that flashed from the eyes that bespoke death to the state highway patrolman when he backed away from her with hands upraised in surrender on the Butler road last December 27.

NO TAXI PEACE, SAYS SIFORD

"There is no more peace in the taxicab strike than there was January 12, when the 1,400 drivers of the Yellow, Green and Checker cabs walked off the job. Reports of a peace move are erroneous and unauthorized."

This was the announcement made last night by A. T. Siford, chairman, after a meeting of the executive committee of the strikers held in the McGeagh Building, Webster avenue. All but two of the 15 committeemen attended the meeting.

A mass meeting of the strikers will be held tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock in Moose Temple, Penn avenue.

Application for a certificate of public convenience was mailed to the Public Service Commission yesterday by Attorney George Wasser, acting for the incorporators of the Hiland Taxicab Company, now in process of formation. DAVIS' BROTHER HIT BY AUTO

POLLANSBEE, W. Va., March 22.—(AP.)—Walter Davis, brother of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, suffered a fractured skull last night when struck by an automobile here. He was taken to a Steubenville, O., hospital in a critical condition.

C. E. McClellan, driver of the automobile, was released on his own recognizance. He said Davis walked into the path of the car.

Mae West's Trial To Resume Monday

NEW YORK, March 22.—(INS.)—Trial of the case against Mae West and 57 others for appearing in "The Pleasure Man," held an indecent play, stood adjourned today until Monday.

Safe Looted Of $3,000 Downtown

Safecrackers took $3,000 from the safe of the Knapp Brothers Company fish store at 20 Diamond Square early today, detectives reported. An envelope containing $300 in the safe was overlooked.

The robbers reached the roof of a vacant building at 16 Diamond Square by fire escape, crossed two roofs and forced open the skylight of the Knapp building.

Eckener's Ship Due In New York Today

NEW YORK, March 22.—(INS.)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, was to arrive in New York today on the liner Hamburg. Dr. Eckener will receive the gold medal of the National Geographic Society.

DOHENY FREE BY U. S. JURY

Doheny, multi-millionaire oil man, was charged with giving Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior in the Harding cabinet, a bribe of $100,000 for the lease to a Doheny company of the Elk Hills, Cal., naval oil reserve.

Fall was convicted in October last year of accepting the money as a bribe and was fined $100,000 and sentenced to serve a year in jail. He is at liberty pending an appeal and did not attend the present trial because of ill health.

Father of Algebra Honored in France

FONTENAY-LE-COMTE, France, March 22.—AP.)—The high school is to be named after the father of modern algebra, Francois Viete, 1540-1603, who was a privy councillor for Henry IV, and solved enemies' codes for his king.

Billions Saved by Thrifty New Yorkers

NEW YORK, March 22.—(INS)—Wage earners of New York put $50,000,000 into savings banks in the first six weeks of 1930, a report of the New York Federal Reserve district revealed today. The report said savings funds in New York banks total $2,500,000,000.

Book Store Door Jimmied in Night

Police were notified today that the lock on the front door of the Jones Book Store, 437 Wood street, had been jimmied and the door forced open last night. The proprietors were checking to determine if anything was stolen.

Mother of Slain Officer Sorry For Irene

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 22.—"I'm sorry, but it had to be," declared Mrs. Vina Paul McGuigan, mother of Corp. Brady Paul, as she left the courtroom after the death verdict had been read to Irene Schroeder. Mrs. McGuigan declined to comment further as she was hurried through the frenzied crowd by her three sons and daughters.

Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti had little to say as he busied himself this morning getting ready to retire to Punxsutawney for a brief rest over the week-end.

"I feel sorry for her people, especially her gray-haired father," he said. "But I did my duty as I saw it."

"It is justice" was the only comment District Attorney John S. Powers would make.

"Of course we are not satisfied. We will fight for this woman's life and carry our appeal to the highest courts in the state." This was Attorney Benjamin Jarrett's statement as he and his associate, Thomas W. Dickey, began laying plans today for their petition for a new trial.

DAGUE DEFENSE HINTS SURPRISE

By LEE CURRAN,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 22.—Surprise testimony was promised today by Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti, after the selection of the jury which will try W. Glenn Dague, charged with the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, is begun, Monday.

Margiotti said he will not depend upon the testimony used against Dague's sweetheart, Irene Schroeder, to convict Dague. A new line of questioning will be pursued, according to Margiotti.

Dague's jury will be selected from an entirely new panel, Margiotti said, because the other panel was exhausted in forming Irene's jury.

Defense attorneys said Dague

Books in Big Steel Merger Fight Close

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 22.—(AP.)—From now on, the proposed consolidation of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company will be fought out on proxy lines alone.

Stock transfer books of Sheet and Tube closed at 1 p. m., and stock transfered now cannot be voted at the stockholders' meeting, April 8, which will determine whether Bethlehem is to become a billion dollar corporation.

The fight for proxies, however, is expected to become even more strenuous as the time grows shorter.

Boy, 4, Points Out to Court Man Who 'Took His Bank'

Bobby Harvey, 4, in his mother's arms, pointed out in East End Police Court today the man who he said took "my bank." The bank contained $176.

The man was Elizah Henry, 30, Negro, of 6315 Broad street.

Bobby, son of Mrs. Mary Harvey, of 6340 Frankstown avenue, explained that when he strolled away from home yesterday he thought it was his own "bank" and not his mother's purse that he held in his hands.

"I went to Henry's home to play with Bobby Henry," the child testified in the language of a grownup. "I didn't know there was money in the 'bank' until Bobby's father took it. Then I went home and told mamma."

Henry was held for court on a charge of larceny. Two other Negroes, Frank Harris, 46, and Fred Henson, 36, were held as material witnesses.

aloud when the verdict was read.

"You d— fools—I don't want your sympathy," was her parting to those staunch West Virginia kinfolk as she was led from the court room, to the wonderment of some 300 spectators who sat in awe, too overwhelmed for a demonstration of their pent up emotions.

FATHER, SISTER COLLAPSE

Joseph Crawford, father of Irene, and favorite of her son, Donnie, was in a state of collapse today. He is suffering from a heart attack, physicians said, but his condition did not prevent him from visiting his condemned daughter in her cell this morning. With him was his son, Joseph Crawford. Mrs. Sarah Muldoon, a sister of the blonde, was confined to bed today, suffering from hysteria which prostrated her last night when the verdict was read.

The courtroom was crowded with spectators. Half an hour before, word spread with lightning-like speed through the city that the jury had reached a verdict.

The message reached Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti in his headquarters at the Castelton Hotel where he had retired for a short rest after his strenuous efforts of the afternoon in making his closing address to the jury.

District Attorney John S. Powers conveyed the message to Margiotti. He hastly summoned his assistants and proceeded to the courtroom. Judge R. L. Hildebrand already had arrived. The courtroom, filled to overflowing, was murmuring expectantly.

SMILES AT SISTERS

"Bring in the prisoner," Judge Hildebrand ordered.

Irene, a slight pallor blanching her round face, entered the room between Sheriff Frank N. Johnston and his chief deputy, [illegible]. She was smiling. She [illegible] at her sisters, inclining her head in a reassuring nod. The sisters, three of them—Mrs. Ruby Schroeder, Mrs. Mayme Baum and Mrs. Muldoon—were sitting in the front row as near as they could get to the blonde. With them was Michael Muldoon. His wife, it seemed, sighed; a sigh of hope as her sister entered.

Mrs. Winifred James, tipstaff in charge of the jurors with Frank Geiger, appeared in the doorway back of the jury box, her entrance heralding the entrance of the jurors with the verdict.

The jurors filed slowly to their seats. In the hands of Juror No. 8, L. Judson Rodgers, Plain Grove [illegible] piece of paper fluttered. [illegible] verdict.

ANSWER ROLL

Judge Hildebrand announced from the bench that he would not tolerate any demonstration from the spectators.

"You must remain in your seats until the prisoner has been removed and the jury discharged," he intoned in a solemn voice.

Clerk Campbell arose. He instructed the jury to answer to rollcall.

Twelve names were called off slowly. They were: Joseph Kelley, Wayne Township; C. Leroy Shira, New Castle; J. E. MacDonald, Ellwood City; Clement Gardner, New Castle; Mrs. Jennie Curtis, Union Township; Samuel Patterson, Plain Grove; Charles R. Hill, Shenango; L. Judson Rodgers, Plain Grove; Theodore Warnock, Scott Township; Mrs. Glades Rosenthal, New Castle; Thomas Kennedy, New Castle, and John Fullerton, Mahoningtown.

One by one they arose to their feet in solemnity.

DOOM PRONOUNCED

"Have you agreed to a verdict?" the clerk inquired.

"We have," came in chorus.

"Who shall say for you?" came the next query.

"Our foreman," was the answer in unison.

Then Rodgers slowly adjusted his glasses. He fumbled with the paper in his hand.

He read slowly:

"Guilty of first degree murder, with the death penalty," he concluded.

The spectators gasped audibly. Their hushed "Oh's" could be heard throughout the courtroom.

Court Crier E. C. Grade rapped for order.

There was a pause. Then Attorney Dickey asked that the jury be polled.

One after another, in answer to their names, the jurors solemnly repeated the verdict as their names were called. Two or three men faltered slightly when they reached the pronouncement of death.

The two women, Mrs. Rosenthal and Mrs. Curtis, repeated the verdict without hesitation.

CROWD SILENCED

There followed a pause, so quiet that a pin could be heard to drop in the farthest corner of the drab courtroom.

Clerk Campbell made a few notations in the record book, then handed it to Judge Hildebrand, who was seated on the bench with Judge James A. Chambers. Judge Hildebrand, accepted the volume, turned it around solemnly, then began the entry which condemns the "trigger woman" to the electric chair.

At the conclusion of this formality, the clerk repeated the verdict which was affirmed in chorus by the jury.

Her head back, she glared at her sisters who were sobbing aloud and denounced them for their display of emotion.

JURY DISCHARGED

Once she was removed from the room, Judge Hildebrand ordered the jury discharged and Mrs. Muldoon again broke out in miserable sobbing.

"Oh, oh, our baby sister," she cried.

Mrs. Muldoon collapsed completely. Straggling spectators paused to look upon the hysterical woman; few stopped to comfort her. They moved as automatoms to the exits, talking among themselves.

Attorney Dickey, after the pronouncement of the verdict, announced he and his associates, Benjamin Jarrett and Kedgwin H. Powell, of Youngstown, would apply for a new trial.

The verdict returned against the blonde gunwoman was reached on the third ballot, it was learned today. The first ballot stood 10 to 2 for the death penalty, all having agreed to her guilt without the necessity of a poll. On the second ballot, the vote stood 11 to 1, it was said, and on the third, taken immediately after the jurors had eaten their dinner in the jury room, brought a unanimous vote for the death penalty.

IRENE TO CLAIM TRIAL ERRORS

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 22.—Attorneys for Irene Schroeder, convicted blonde gunwoman, today announced that they would present a motion for a new trial Monday.

Thomas W. Dickey, associate counsel, for the buxom gun toting waitress, made the announcement of his plans this morning after tentatively reviewing the testimony and objections of defense overruled by Judge R. L. Hildebrand during the trial.

Errors in the trial; remarks of Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiott, in his closing argument to the jury, and overruled objections will be the basis of the application, Mr. Dickey announced.

He will file the application Monday, but it will require at least a week or more before the transcription of testimony is completed, it was said. Judge Hildebrand, will set a date for the filing of reasons and will rule on the application later.

Nineteen points of law were submitted to the court yesterday to be included in his charge. Five of these were stricken out. Judge Hildebrand incorporating the other 14 in his charge to the jury. One of the five stricken out petitioned the court to direct a verdict of acquittal.

Should Judge Hildebrand deny the self-styled "Trigger Woman" a new trial Dickey announced the case will be appealed to the State Supreme Court and if necessary, a petition for commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment. Irene's last resort, it was pointed out, is the State Board of Appeals.

would not plead guilty, although he admitted he had the gun from which the bullet was fired, which killed Corp. Paul.

The Dague defense will be, it was said, that Paul was killed when Moore was bumped by him and Moore's gun was discharged. A bullet discharged from Moore's gun killed Paul, according to the defense.

Dague attracted much attention during Irene's trial when he refused to answer questions put to him by Margiotti. When called the first time he told the jury he had a 38-caliber revolver, and that Irene had a smaller gun. Corp. Paul was killed with a 38-caliber bullet.

A plea from Dague was anticipated at the conclusion of Irene's trial, but Attorney Dickey announced this morning that his client would stand trial. It was generally understood that should Irene receive a life imprisonment recommendation from the jury, Dague would plead guilty, throwing himself on the mercy of the court and anticipating the same penalty.

Inasmuch as the jury recommended death for Irene, it was pointed out, Dague would stand trial and take his chances of clemency with a jury.

Selection of a jury for Dague will begin Monday, it was announced by Judge Hildebrand, who declared an adjournment until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Irene First of Sex Facing Death Chair in State

Irene Schroeder, the blonde gunwoman, today is face to face with the extreme penalty, such as was paid by two other women in the Western Pennsylvania district for their crimes within the commonwealth. However, the other women were put to death by hanging. The blonde, if her appeals are in vain, will die in the electric chair, the first in Pennsylvania since this method of execution was adopted.

The other two Western Pennsylvania women were executed in Allegheny County many years ago. In 1866 Mrs. Martha Grinder, a nurse, of the North Side, was hanged after she had been found guilty of poisoning several children whom she had attended. Several years previous, Charlotta Jones, of Homestead, paid with her life for a murder she and two male companions are said to have committed in Homestead. The three are said to have waylaid an aged man who they believed had great wealth. All three were hanged the same day.

The executions of the three women in this county took place in the old jail and courthouse on Grant street which were replaced by the present buildings.

Irene was the one hundred and ninth person to stand trial for murder in Lawrence county since 1857. She is the tenth woman defendant and the first ever convicted and sentenced to death. Of the ten, one was adjudged insane; two were convicted of second degree murder; two of manslaughter and four were acquitted.

EIGHT PLACES ROBBED BY BANDITS

Store Owners and Patrons Listed as Raid Victims; Total Loot Only $400

Bandits held up four restaurants, two meat markets, a garage and a drug store in the city and county early today and late yesterday. Their total loot was approximately $400.

Bound hand and foot, two men were left in a closed automobile at the Morningside Garage, 1801 Morningside avenue, by four youthful robbers who, early today, stole $30 and drove off in a machine stolen from the establishment. The robbers abandoned a car in place of the one they stole.

According to John Vetters, 49, of 179 Lodi way, watchman at the garage, the four entered and asked for a place to park their machine. All drew revolvers and while one watched him, the others looted the cash register of $12 and drove a machine from inside the establishment, into the street. They then took $18 from Vetters' pocket, his pay.

They were preparing to leave when George Lynch, 7215 Baker street appeared. One of the men stole 25 cents from him. The two men were then bound and placed inside a machine. It was almost an hour before they were able to free themselves.

LOOT MEAT MARKET

Two armed holdup men entered the meat market of Sol H. Faigen, 300 Dickson avenue, Homestead, early today, forced two employes into a refrigerator, looted the cash register, and escaped in a waiting automobile with $20. The presence of mind of one of the clerks saved $40 more, which had hastily been hidden behind the counter.

Miss Helen LaPoint, of 7825 Bennett street, in charge of the Parks lunch room, 7331 Frankstown avenue, was forced to stand from behind the counter when two men held up the establishment early today. They took $18 and a revolver from the cash register. Chris Klaas, a street car conductor, eating his breakfast, was robbed of $37.50 and a Pittsburgh Railways employe's pass. The robbers took $15 belonging to Robert Moorehead, a conductor, from behind the counter where he had placed it the night before, returned 12 cents to James McGreevy, then fled.

ROB RESTAURANT GUEST

The restaurant of August Datig, 2375 Brownsville road, was entered by three young armed robbers who stole $60 and cigarets after threatening Datig. August Miffler, of 21 Merritt street, a patron, was robbed of $25 in cash and $95 in jewelary. One of the intruders cut the telephone wires.

Four men were in the band that held up the Liberty restaurant, 925 Federal street, shortly before 6 o'clock this morning. Three entered the store and forced John Banbelis, night manager, to turn over $60 from the cash register. They escaped in an automobile in which the fourth member had remained.

Oakmont police and county detectives today were continuing their investigations of the holdups of a restaurant and butcher shop in Oakmont yesterday. Four thugs entered the restaurant of Joe Mountain, Hilton road and Allegheny avenue, threatened a waitress with their revolvers and escaped with $30 obtained from a cash register. The bandits later held up John Kojales in his meat market at Oakmont and College avenues, where they obtained $4.50, police say.

County detectives were also investigating the holdup of Kennels Barbecue in Plum Township. The same gang is believed to have staged all the robberies, according to police.

HUNT STORE THIEVES

County detectives and Bellevue police today were on the hunt for three armed bandits who threatened four persons, including a woman, when they invaded the Craig Pharmacy, at 178 Lincoln avenue, Bellevue, last night.

B. L. Craig, the proprietor, and Alex Yunkovich, soda clerk, and a customer, whose name was not learned by police, were ordered to throw up their hands by the armed thugs. While one of the robbers looted the cash register of $80, a woman patron walked in. The thugs greeted her with an order to throw up her hands also.

The robbers fled from the store without searching the victims. They headed for the North Side in a stolen automobile.

Thieves broke into the building of the Dravosburg Automobile Company, Dravosburg, between 2 a. m. and 5 a. m. this morning and stole three radios valued at $500. County detectives are investigating.

6 Boys Under Bail For Stealing Auto

Six youths were at liberty under $500 bail today after two had been held for court and four for juvenile court by Justice of the Peace Walter Terrill, of West Homestead, last night. The sextet were accused of having stolen an automobile owned by the Pittsburgh Testing and Laboratory Company, Stevenson and Locust streets.

John Awonocitz, 16, and John Magerl, 17, both of Pittsburgh, were held for court. Because of their youth, the Sun-Telegraph will not publish the names of the boys held for juvenile court.

DAVIS CAMP CONFIDENT

On the other hand there were astute observers who held that such a wave on Grundy's part would be an almost fatal admission of weakness that would crystalize wavering sentiment upon the Davis and Brown candidacies.

Doubt was expressed that the "War Board" members would consider such overtures in view of Grundy's scorn of the Philadelphians when he forced himself and Lewis on the state organization.

Vare, Davis and Brown met their supporters last night in Brown's office, and while no formal statement was forthcoming, there were indications that announcement of the complete slate would be made today.

Others at the conference were W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and Republican national committeeman; Judge George W. Maxey, of Scranton; Justice John W. Kephart, of the State Supreme Court, who is tacitly admitted to represent the Baker-Beidleman forces; James Thompson, of Erie; William P. Gallagher, of Wilkes-Barre, and members of the "war board."

SERVICE CONTINUED

Operation of 30 cabs was continued in the downtown district yesterday by the Yellow Cab Company. No disorder was reported. The company officials would not indicate when they intend to extend service.

The union drivers are continuing "relief automobile service" for the benefit of the strikers' relief fund from the headquarters, 1711 Liberty avenue. Until after the hearing on the injunction granted by Judge Josiah Cohen it is not illegal for these cars to be operated, it was said at the sheriff's office.

PENNINGTON TRIAL LIST REFUTED

Graham Gives Figures to Show Most Liquor Cases Have Been Passed Upon

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Answering a challenge made early in January by Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington, of the Western Pennsylvania - West Virginia district, as to the number of prohibition cases pending in the Western Pennsylvania section, United States Attorney Louis E. Graham, of Pittsburgh, has filed with the Department of Justice here a report showing that only 172 such cases designated by Pennington remain on his records as "capable of being tried."

A difference between the prohibition administrator and the Federal attorney developed, it was learned here today, after Pennington, in a statement to government agencies in Washington, claimed that records of his office indicated a Federal total of 1,553 prohibition cases were pending in the attorney's office, some of the cases going back as far as 1923.

SUBMITS BIG LIST

Called upon by Graham to submit a list of the cases, Pennington, it was disclosed, prepared a list of 1,015, which he claimed were subject to trial.

When Graham challenged the list a conference was held between the two officials, at which it was agreed to have clerks under both Pennington and Graham go over the records and submit a report.

This report, which is the one Graham has submitted to the Department of Justice here, reveals the following information:

MANY CASES CLOSED

That of the 1,015 cases specified by Pennington, 610 had been actually closed before the Pennington list was submitted, 57 were cases for which no adequate records were available or were duplications; 176 cases were where bonds had been forfeited, the defendants not being apprehended, and other reported not in the district by the United States marshal, thus accounting for 843 of the total and leaving only 172 as "capable of being tried," as Graham expressed it.

While department officials have declined to discuss the report finally presented here, the statement is made in informed circles that Federal Attorney Graham will be advised that his findings will be accepted.

Survey Shows Limited High School Drinking

Indulgence in alcoholic stimulants is not necessary to insure popularity in and out of school life, although 21 per cent of high school seniors indulge on occasion, a survey made public yesterday by the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education shows.

Dr. J. W. Claudy, of Pittsburgh, supervised the work. Many representative cities, including Pittsburgh, are named in the report, which took more than a year to compile.

Pittsburgh is representative of such conditions throughout the nation, it was stated, but the exact findings of the local survey were not made public.

More than 78 per cent of the more than 1,000 students polled said they drank at no time, although 21 per cent confessed to occasional indulgence to be "good fellows." None admitted frequent imbibing.

Ninety-two per cent said that it "isn't necessary to drink to attain social popularity," according to the report. Friends of 20.1 per cent drink, it was shown, and parents of 19.2 per cent indulge frequently.

Belief that the prohibition amendment has proved helpful in bettering conditions in the nation is shared by 70 per cent, the report shows. Students in 70 high schools in 42 states were polled.

5-POWER NAVAL HOPES AT END

By HARRY R. FLORY
International News Service.

LONDON, March 22.—All compromise proposals offered by the oceanic powers—England, America and Japan—to France and Italy have been "thoroughly explored" by delegates of the latter countries and none has been found satisfactory, it was stated in Italian sources here today.

The statement revealed officially for the first time the wide gulf that exists between the Mediterranean powers and the "big three." It indicated without qualification that as matters stand at present, there is no hope of a five-power disarmament treaty being negotiated at the present conference.

Unless outside interests make new suggestions forming a possible basis for compromise, further direct conversations are utterly useless, it was said.

This was regarded as a definite ultimatum that unless some satisfactory proposal was made in the near future, the Italians would leave the conference and return home, with no intention of coming back to London for the time being at least.

As all the French delegates already have returned to Paris with the exception of Ambassador De Fleuriau, whose headquarters are in London anyway, the statement is virtually tantamount to disintegration of the five-power conference, with Japan, England and America left to their own devices to formulate whatever agreement they can between them.

Worst 'Killer' Slips Through Police Net

CHICAGO, March 22.—(AP.)—Acting on a tip that Fred Burke, notorious killer, could be found in a house on South Michigan avenue, police raided the place early today. They failed to find Burke but seized whisky and champagne valued at $10,000. Nine men around a bar in one of the rooms of the once-fashionable mansion were arrested.

Burke, reputed "most widely hunted gunman in the United States," is under indictment as leader at the St. Valentine's Day massacre of seven George (Bugs) Moran gangsters.

BOSINESS BOOM ON, SAYS MAY

LOS ANGELES, March 22.—(Universal)—Business is definitely on the up-grade. Unemployment is decreasing. Building is unusually active throughout the country.

And the man and woman with the buying dollar are steadily spending more, not merely for necessities, but for the luxuries that for a brief time felt the pinch of the November stock market flurry.

Morton May, president of the May organization, who looks at the business world through the medium of half a dozen of the nation's biggest department stores, said so.

He is in Los Angeles for a 10 days' stay, coming from his headquarters in St. Louis.

"Conditions are not only getting better—they are better," he said.

"People are buying freely and sensibly. Retail prices are lower now than they have been since the war, and quality is better. The woman who wants a moderate-priced gown has a wider choice of better goods than she has had for years—and yet that has been accomplished without hurting either the manufacturer or the retailer."

Auto Kills Woman, Driver to Give Bond

Lloyd W. Luthy, of 104 East Fourth avenue, Homestead, was to appear before the coroner today to post bond pending the inquest into the death of Sara O'Malley, 35, who was fatally injured when struck, police say, by Luthy's automobile in front of her home at 3001 Chartiers avenue, last night. The woman suffered a fractured skull and died in the Mercy Hospital three hours after the accident.

Confectioner Held For Running Lottery

Mike Sotak, confectioner of 1003 Swissvale avenue, Wilkinsburg, was held for court on a charge of operating a lottery, when arraigned before Justice of the Peace George B. Shields in Wilkinsburg, last night. It was testified that Sotak had sold a "number" on the clearng house lottery to a 7-year-old girl. Two men arrested when Constable A. C. Nye raided Sotak's store, were discharged.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID BALFOUR

WHITTINGEHAME, Scotland, March 22.—(INS.)—Simple country folk from miles around came to the quaint church here this morning to pay their last respects to the Earl of Balfour, a man of their own kind who had become one of the British Empire's most distinguished statesmen.

Aged and bent old men and women, who had known Alfred Balfour in his boyhood, and timid children, knowing and loving him from their parents' tales of his lovable character and great deeds, filed past the antique oak casket in which lay the remains of their own "Laird of Whittingehame."

And while memorial services were being said in London, in all British dominions and in Palestine and America, old servants of the Balfour family carried the casket into the little graveyard where the Earl was laid to rest beside the Balfours who had gone before.

Europa Sails Easily At 27-Knot Speed

ABOARD S. S. EUROPA, at Sea, March 22. — (INS.) — In clear weather and moderate seas the Europa this morning was steaming smoothly toward New York and the completion of her maiden voyage. With no attempt being made to push the great liner she was holding to a speed approximating 27 knots.

While the officers of the vessel insist that they are not making any special effort to better the record of their sister ship, the Bremen, it is believed possible that the Bremen's time may be lowered if bad weather is not encountered.

FAMILY FLEES SECOND FIRE

The second fire within six hours this morning forced eight persons to flee from a two-family dwelling at 161 Forty-first street.

When the blaze broke out the second time, Mrs. John Burgess, occupying the second floor apartment, rushed to the street, carrying her 5-year-old son, Bernard, in her arms.

Six of a family on the first floor also escaped from the flames. They were Joseph B. Nichols, his wife and four children, Joseph, Jr., aged 12; Ruth, aged 10; William, aged 6, and Norman, aged 2, who was carried to safety by his mother.

The first fire, originating in the chimney, was noticed at 2 a. m. by a pedestrian, who summoned firemen. The flames were quickly extinguished. The second blaze, starting at 8 a. m. from a defective flue, caused damage estimated at $2,000.

National Miners To Hold Elections

Banker With Rifle Shoots Bandit, Captures Pal

CHICAGO, March 22.—(AP.)—Three years ago E. J. Eckman, assisant cashier of the First National Bank of Riverside, concealed in his cage a high-powered rifle. Yesterday he used it, shot one bank robber, captured another, and recovered $2,000 in cash that had been taken from him.

Walter Young, who said he was from Kansas City, was wounded perhaps fatally. Ben Howard, his companion, was captured.

RED MEETING CALLED

Determined to hold an unemployment demonstration tonight, Pat Devine, local Communist organizer, today announced a meeting for 7:30 p. m. in Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, regardless of police action.

Devine declared the committee for the Trade Union Unity League will be prepared to continue the meeting even if police attempt to break it up. Several speakers have been listed.

South Side police yesterday afternoon arrested Edward E. Callen, 51, of 2820 Sagemore street, when he attempted to open a hall at 30 South Eleventh street to hold an unemployment demonstration.

'MOVE ON' ORDER GIVEN CAPONE

CHICAGO, March 22.—(INS.)—Apparently unmoved by the police warning that he must get out of town, Alphonse "Scarface" Capone, reputed leader of Chicago's best known gang, returned to his desk today to attend to his "business interests."

Strolling into the office of Deputy Police Commissioner John Stege yesterday from Eastern Penitentiary, Philadelphia, last Monday. He had been sought by police continuously since his release.

"Here I am now what are you going to do about it? was the attitude his words and demeaner expressed.

"I have no charge against you, but it will not be safe for you to hang around town, Al." Commissioner Stege told the gang leader who has been credited by authorities with some of Chicago's choicest underworld executions.

Capone arrived with his legal adviser, Thomas D. Nash. As their automobile drew up in front of police headquarters another automobile, containing three watchful men, stopped on the other side of the street. They looked carefully in all directions as the beer baron made his way into the building. Capone always has a few bodyguards on the job.

Coffin for Coal Transaction in 1844

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., March 22.—A coffin was paid for a load of coal 86 years ago when farm products, coal and other articles were bartered for merchandise in lieu of currency, Arthur Vickers, Brownsville, found a scrap of paper between the walls of his home. The letter was written to Matthew Coffin by James Woods and asked for a coffin in trade for coal.

APPROVAL SEEN FOR PARKER

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP.)—The nomination of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as an associate justice of the Supreme Court, is expected to be approved by the Senate with a minimum of opposition.

This view was expressed in many quarters today after study of the situation which found signs of dissatisfaction and several pertinent factors to support the prediction.

Chief among the latter was the favorable attitude of the Southern Democrats. Parker is a Republican, but the Democrats from his section have a high regard for his qualifications and are pleased that the South has thus been recognized. In addition, the Republican regulars are expected to support the President's selection.

The Independents are reserving judgment. Senator Borah, of Idaho, and Senator Norris, of Nebraska, the leaders of the group, are awaiting more complete information as to Parker's qualifications. From what they know of him already, they said, they are inclined to favor his confirmation.

Man Hit by Auto Dies of Injuries

Michael Sabsano, 50, of Lawn street, died last night in Mercy Hospital from a fractured skull suffered several hours before when he was struck by an automobile in the Boulevard of the Allies, near Bates street. Police arrested Joseph L. Rubin, of 3609 Penn avenue, is the driver of the car, they said. He was ordered to report to the coroner today.

SOLDIERS SENT TO AID MISSION

PEIPING, China, March 22.—(AP.)—A telegram from Nanking to the American legation here today said that soldiers were being hurried to Kanhcow, where 11 American Roman Catholic missionaries are said to be besieged by Chinese Communists.

The apostolic delegate here received word that the missionaries were in difficulties owing to Communist activities, but he has no confirmation that they are trapped.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—(AP.)—The State Department today awaited advices from China regarding reports that 11 Catholic missionaries were besieged in Kanchow by Chinese Communists.

In response to an appeal from the Rev. John J. Burke, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the department advised that all missionaries be withdrawn at once from Southern Kiangsi, the province in which Kanchow is located, and stay away "until safe conditions are restored."

Warning of danger came from Edward Young, an American missionary at Nananfu, Kiangsi, who was captured and released by bandits several months ago. He said that Bishop O'Shea and 10 others were trapped and in "very grave" danger.

The State Department revealed that Bishop O'Shea had sent three appeals for help since December 1.

Two in Stolen Car Seized at Munhall

Edward Curran, 22, of 2315 Woodstock avenue, Swissvale, and Paul Measley, 24, of 7106 Michigan avenue, today were being held by Munhall police pending further investigation. The pair were arrested by Patrolman William Howley while riding in an automobile said by police to have been stolen from B. C. Kerigan, of 2210 Manor avenue, Swissvale.

Rockefellers To Spend 10 Millions for Forests

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—John D. Rockefeller and his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., have recently set aside millions of dollars in a movement to purchase vast timber tracts to add to the national parks of the nation, it has been learned.

Already $8,000,000 has been donated in these park projects, according to national park authorities, and the total will be run up to $10,000,000, it was estimated.

One of the most important of the timber lands now under negotiation concerns 20,000 acres of valuable yellow pine and sugar pine in the Yosemite National Park, which will probably be bought for about $3,000,000. The Rockefellers are contributing half of this sum.

The decision in the Yosemite purchase will be made today or Monday, it was announced by Horace M. Albright, director of the National Park Service. If the lumber company declines to yield the land of which they have already denuded some 6,000 acres by extensive cutting, the government will proceed with condemnation proceedings.

Rockefeller's interest in the national parks began some years ago but took concrete form only ten months ago. Since that time the "oil king" has made available to the states of North Carolina and Tennessee, $5,000,000 for the acquisition of lands necessary to round out the Great Smoky Mountain National Park, lying midway between the two states.

Officer Saves Fire Chief's Life in Glendale Blaze

Rescue from almost certain death in the flames of a burning coal tipple at Mansfield mine, Pittsburgh Coal Company, last midnight, leaves the Glendale fire chief indebted for his life to a Glendale patrolman. One fireman was hurt in the blaze.

The blaze broke out in the tipple of the mine, situated on Washington Avenue Extension, Glendale. Flames ate at the timberwork of the structure for nearly four hours from the time of the alarm, at 10:10 p. m. Damage was estimated by Fire Chief John Franko, of Glendale, at between $10,000 and $15,000.

"He and I," said Franko, "were in the tipple; my men were under orders not to enter until I gave the word. I started down a ladder, the rungs of which were burning.

"Suddenly, shaken, I guess, from above, ladder and floor gave way beneath me. I started to plunge into the blaze below when Manning grasped my arm, pulled me to safety."

His leg hurt when he stumbled on a railroad tie, Fireman Joe Black, 401 Center street, Glendale, was taken home from the scene of the fire. His condition is not serious, physicians say.

Fire trucks from Glendale, East Carnegie and Heidelberg answered the alarm. Franko directed the work of the firemen.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mary Lewis, Bride-Elect, Guest of Honor at Numerous Parties

EVEN though the first days of official spring may have a chilly air reminiscent of winter, spring brides are unmindful, because the sun is shining, even if it doesn't warm one up much, and because their friends are planning so many events for them.

For some time entertainments have been given for brides-elect, and will be continued until the weddings are over.

The most honored bride-elect during the last few weeks has been Mary Currier Lewis, daughter of the James Edward Lewises, of Aylesboro avenue, who'll marry Solon Armour Person, of Memphis, Tenn., son of Mrs. John Mench, of Pittsburgh, on Wednesday.

* * *

SPEAKING of brides, I'm reminded of a wedding taking place today in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Pittsfield, Mass. And the bride is a former Pittsburgh girl, Louise H. Osborne, daughter of the Lovall A. Osbornes, of White Lodge, Stockbridge, Mass.

Wedding Today

The bridegroom is Gilbert Stanley, of London, son of Mrs. William Stanley, of Great Barrington, Mass.

The wedding is taking place at 5:30 o'clock, with the bride's father giving her in marriage, and with the Rev. Edmund Randolph Laine as the officiant. Ferns and palms bank the altar of the Church and form a background for spring flowers.

* * *

Quaint Costume

Her sister, Nancy B. Osborne, is maid of honor; her sister-in-law, Mrs. Lovall A. Osborne, Jr., is matron of honor, and Jane Quinby and Peggy Perkins, of New York; Margaret Brewer, of Utica, and Mrs. George Warter, of Baltimore, Md., are bridesmaids.

Others who are ushers are Edward Bourne, Penroe Stout and John S. Osborne, of New York; Barclay Robinson, of Hartford, Conn.; Richard Beebe, of Boston, and Edward M. Gaillard, of New Haven.

Last evening the junior Loyall A. Osbornes gave the rehearsal dinner, and today Mrs. William Stanley, mother of the bridegroom, gave the wedding breakfast.

* * *

NOW a busy whirl of entertaining will commence, in honor of Mary Elizabeth Close, daughter of the Clifton Henry Closes, of Beechwood boulevard, whose marriage to Harrison Farnsworth Gleason, Jr., son of the Harrison Farnsworth Gleasons, of Aylesboro avenue, will be an event of April 4.

Honor Bride

Her bridal party has been named, too, and her sister, Anna Katherine Close, will be maid of honor, and she is to be hostess at a theater party in Mary's honor, on March 1, with a supper dance in the William Penn, given by Harry Hagmaier, a member of the bridal party, afterwards.

Margaret Jane Petty, who is to be a bridesmaid, will give a dinner dance in the Edgewood Country Club on March 29. On April 1, Samuel Robb and Alfred Diebold, also in the bridal party, will be hosts at a theater party and supper dance in the clubhouse of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association.

The rehearsal dinner on April 3 is to be given by Elizabeth Ganter Close, in the Pittsburgh Country Club.

* * *

TODAY I have some more "Wizard of Oz" patronesses to enumerate. Of course you all know that the Junior League will present this play, long a favorite with the children, on the mornings of April 5 and 12 at 10:30 o'clock, in the Pitt Theater.

Sponsor League

Mrs. Augustus K. Oliver and Mrs. Moses Atwood are on the list of patronesses as are Mrs. John W. Lawrence, Mrs. John M. Freeman, Miss Anne Semple, Mrs. William McBride, Mrs. Charles F. Patterson, Mrs. Robert T. M. McCready, Mrs. Walter F. Schleiter, Mrs. William Flower, Mrs. Francis Keating, Mrs. George W. J. Bissell, Mrs. Alexander Blair, Mrs. Walter C. Carroll, Mrs. Grant Curry, Mrs. Frank S. Love, Mrs. G. Cook Kimball.

Others who are supporting the work of the league are such well-known women as Mrs. James D. Heard, Mrs. Robert D. Totten, Mrs. Robert Applegate, Mrs. Donald C. Bakewell, Mrs. J. Twing Brooks, Mrs. S. G. Cooper, Mrs. Ralph Gibbs, Mrs. G. C. Hutchinson, Mrs. Hubert Moore, Mrs. R. C. Jennings and Miss Katherine Walker.

* * *

HOME from the National Cathedral School in Washington, D. C., is Marjorie Catherine Stewart, who's the daughter of the Howard G. Stewarts, of Beechwood boulevard. Marjorie is to have as her house guest, another student of the Cathedral School, Dorothy Fields, of Houston, Tex., who will be here until April 1.

Spring Recess

Now news comes of travelers in various cities and countries. Mrs. Henry Chalfant, who has been in New York at the Berkshire, sailed last night on the Saturnia, for Europe.

Mrs. James M. Schoonmaker and her daughter, Gretchen, are registered at the Weylin in New York.

Mrs. George Hamilton Flinn and Mrs. William N. Frew, who have been vacationing in Bermuda, have returned and are in Gotham for a few days at the St. Regis.

* * *

THIS afternoon Mrs. Charles J. Swick, of Lilac street, Squirrel Hill, is giving a bridge luncheon in her home to announce the betrothal of her daughter, Miss La Verne Swick, to Raymond O'Connell, of Irwin. Floral decorations are spring flowers. An early spring wedding will terminate the engagement.

* * *

THE Oliver Club was entertained at the home of Mrs. A. A. Smith, of Mt. Washington on Wednesday evening. The club will have another dinner party on Monday evening for members only.

* * *

MRS. HENRY Z. CURLL, of Philadelphia, who has just returned from wintering in Los Angeles, Cal., where she visited her daughter, Mrs. L. R. Richard, formerly of Pittsburgh, before returning to Philadelphia will spend a few weeks visiting her daughters, Mrs. David N. Carlin, of Heberton avenue, and Mrs. J. George Kahl, of Ben Avon.

* * *

A BAZAR and two dinners will be held by the Goodwill Industries, Women's Auxiliary, on Thursday and Friday in the Mt. Lebanon Methodist Episcopal Church, West Liberty avenue and Scott road. There will be an exhibition of the handwork of the children of the Goodwill Industries in the assembly room of the church. A meeting of the board of directors will be held on Thursday evening.

FRANCES FITZGERALD — JANE ALLDERDICE

Miss Fitzgerald, arriving in New York from a West Indies cruise, bidding good-bye to another Pittsburgher, Miss Allderdice, who sailed on the Aquitania to attend the famous Grand National at Aintree, Eng. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Allderdice.

New Courses To Open at Central

MANY new courses to be given by leading professional people will feature the spring term which opens at Central Branch Young Women's Christian Association next week. A special effort has been made to plan courses which will interest all women and girls and to arrange convenient day and evening hours. For this reason many of the courses are scheduled for Tuesday evening, so that, beginning with the forum supper at 5:50, arrangements may be made for several classes during the evening.

This Tuesday evening will be unusually interesting because of open meetings in all the new classes. The Rev. Dr. Albert E. Day will speak on "The New Challenge to Christianity" at the forum supper in the second of the Lenten talks. Miss B. Mae Perry, in charge of special music, has asked Herbert Peabody, organist at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, to play during the hour. Mr. Peabody is also arranging for special choral numbers to be presented by six of his choir boys.

Following supper, at 7:20 open meetings for visitors will be held in the new classes. Among these are: "Creative Writing," with Mrs. Harvey Gaul; "Law As It Affects Women," Miss Ella Graubert, Pittsburgh attorney; "Gardening," (how to grow, cut and arrange colorful flowers), Miss Marie B. Knauz; "Vocabulary Building," Mrs. Edna L. Ruse, and "Better English," Miss Elizabeth Frost.

At the same hour, in the course on "Vocational Adjustment and Unemployment," Miss Grace Wilson, director of employment at Central Branch, will give the first in this series. Mrs. Edith Miller Tufts and Miss Helena L. Fitzsimmons will give later talks on this subject.

"Character Study," the course scheduled for Tuesday at 8:25 o'clock, which will include among its speakers Miss Thyrsa W. Amos and Dr. Edith Hale Swift, will be opened this Tuesday by Miss Essie Mae Davidson, director of education at Central Branch, who will speak on "Education for Character." "Conversation and Self-Expression in Speech" is the new course being given by Miss Mary Jane Paul. Two sessions are offered—one on Thursday evenings at 6:45 to 8:30 and one on Wednesday mornings at 10 to 11:30.

* * *

AT least two units of the Allegheny County League of Women Voters will have special celebrations of the tenth anniversary of woman suffrage on Wednesday. A luncheon will be held by the Bellevue League in the Bellevue Y. M. C. A. under Mrs. Smiley Graham's chairmanship and with Mrs. J. O. Miller, former state president, and Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, county chairman, as honor guests. At 2 o'clock the party will listen in to the program of speeches being broadcast from New York, where the principal event in the country-wide celebration will be taking place and at which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, honorary president; Miss Belle Sherwin, national president, and Miss Katharine Ludington, vice president, will be speaking.

A mystery birthday cake, presented by Mrs. O. G. Sharpless, will be one of the attractions of the Dormont-Mt. Lebanon League's celebration luncheon in Lebanon Hall. A Salmagundi frolic will follow the luncheon and the radio program.

A dinner meeting in honor of Mrs. E. B. Motz will be held by the Twenty-fifth Ward League on Tuesday evening, in the North Side Y. M. C. A., Monterey street. A musical program will be given, after which Mrs. Motz will speak on the May primaries.

Mrs. J. G. Chalfant, member of the Wilkinsburg school board, will address the Wilkinsburg League on Wednesday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A., speaking on "Our Schools."

The March conference meeting of the County League will be held Thursday in the Congress of Clubs. The morning session, which opens at 10:30 o'clock, will be devoted to committee reports. Luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock, after which Dr. W. M. Davidson, superintendent of Pittsburgh's schools, will speak on "The New Salary System in Pittsburgh." Following Dr. Davidson's talk Dr. Ben Graham will speak on "The Edmund's Act."

The Ben Avon League will meet in the home of Mrs. James Hamilton, Church avenue, on Friday morning when Mrs. Motz will demonstrate the voting machine and speak concerning the May primaries.

Mrs. Blanche Heinrich will be hostess to the Swissvale League on Friday afternoon at her home in Hampton avenue. A short business session will be held and Mrs. Motz will speak.

* * *

ANDREY AVINOFF, director of the Carnegie Museum, was the speaker at the regular meeting of the College Club yesterday. His subject was "The Development of Russian Art," which he illustrated with slides. Mrs. James C. Reed was tea hostess at the tea and was assisted by Mrs. J. F. Rodgers and Mrs. Montford Jones at the tea table and Mrs. Norman C. Riggs, Mrs. C. S. Rine and Mrs. Walter Rittman as aides.

The social committee of the club is sponsoring a dinner dance this evening. Mrs. Carl Clock, Mrs. Louis Goehring, Mrs. Philip C. Hodill, Mrs. H. A. Kohman, Miss Katherine MacClosky, Miss Louise Succop and Mrs. H. H. Talbot are assisting in arrangements.

* * *

A WEEK-END trip to Washington has been planned by Court Pittsburgh, Catholic Daughters of America for May 10. Miss Hilda Shannon, assisted by Mrs. Rose O'Donnell, will be in charge. Wednesday evening of this week has been set aside for a card party and a round table on practical nursing which Miss Mary Rau, graduate nurse, will conduct.

* * *

MISS LYDE KERR WILSON will describe the Braille system at Tuesday night's meeting of the Dormont Mothers' Club. Miss Suzanne Hoffer and Miss Constance Aldenhoven will add readings and piano numbers to the program, which has been planned by the committee on work for the blind.

THE tea, given yesterday by the Pittsburgh Girls' Conference, in honor of Miss Helen Harris and Miss Isabel P. Kennedy, was a delightful and colorful event in the International Institute by ensemble groups of musicians from Peabody, Allderdice, Oliver and other city high schools, was one of the attractive features.

Among the hostess and tea table aides were Mrs. A. R. Templeton, Miss Olivia Naly, Miss Mary Louise Succop, Miss Regina DeSimmone, Miss Margaret Mathison, Miss Helen Glynn, Miss Virginia Craft, Miss Margaret Rodgers, Miss Sara Moore, Miss Louise Hirsch, Miss Mildred Colker, Miss Freda Pomerantz, Miss Vera Levison, Miss Elinor Page, Miss Marjorie Holden, Miss Rose Sky and Miss Ruth Buckwalter.

The next important event, to be sponsored by the Conference, will be Pittsburgh's fourth institute on girls' work, to be held April 22 in the William Penn Hotel.

AT the monthly meeting of Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, which was held yesterday, two applications were received for scholarships offered by the chapter. A committee was appointed by the president, Mrs. John P. Cowan, to confer with Mayor Charles H. Kline regarding the placing of a marker on the site of the old Western Penitentiary where Morgan's officers were imprisoned in 1863-64. Mrs. Cowan, Mrs. Elder Marshall and Mrs. Charles C. Bunton comprise the committee. Contributions were made by the chapter to the Junior League and to the Matthew Fontaine Maury Scholarship in St. John's College, Annapolis. Mrs. A. F. Hofmann and Mrs. Carrol T. Sinclair presided at the tea table during the social hour.

THE Homewood Women's Club will be addressed by Judge James H. Gray on "Outlawing War" at the meeting on Monday in Homewood Carnegie Library. Mrs. D. Edwin Miller will also speak, giving an illustrated safety talk. Music will be in charge of Mrs. W. M. McMillin, and hostesses will be Mrs. S. G. Hartman, Mrs. W. L. Brainard, Mrs. Olean Donahue and Mrs. Thomas A. Keefe.

The club luncheon at the Food Craft Shop yesterday was attended by about 80 members and guests. A trio composed of Janet Spaugh, pianist; Grace Brazell, cellist, and Florence Solvey, violinist, furnished a musical program, and a fashion talk was an additional feature.

Do You Remember?

You have lots of time to read on Sunday! That's why you'll enjoy the reminiscent pictures under the caption "Remember?" in the rotogravure section of tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph. Remember what the old Bissell Block looked like before it gave way to the Chamber of Commerce Building? Remember the Thanksgiving Day inspection of Pittsburgh's finest on the North Side twenty years ago? These pictures are in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

TAFFETA FAVORITE FABRIC FOR NEWEST EVENING GOWNS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 22.—The taffeta trail winds across the map of the mode. Taffeta had some success last autumn and this season was worn by many smart women at various fashionable winter resorts. And judging by its prevalence in the collections of the leading couturiers here, it seems likely to duplicate its popularity in the months to come. The real triumph, of course, is that of the weavers who have contrived to manufacture taffeta in such a supple weave that it can be manipulated with grace and ease, and yet maintain that crisp cool effect that is one of that fabric's best attributes. The old-world, grandmamma's best-frock look that characterizes taffeta is cleverly in keeping with the demure note of yesteryear stressed by so many of the most ultra-modern frocks.

MANY of the creations seen at the recent Bal de la Couture were almost salad-like in their green crispness. Green was a color frequently used, after black and white, both solid and combined. And taffeta was a popular fabric used, by nearly every house contributing to the attractive defile of mannequins across the vast stage of the Opera. One of the most effective ensembles seen here was this coat and gown of Empire green taffeta, that is shown here. The skirt, the only part of the gown visible, was very bouffant and seemed to be formed by a series of curving panels, cutting up at either side and in the center of the front and back. The little coat is lavishly trimmed with that most flattering of furs, blue fox.

GERMAN SHIP LINES MERGE

COLOGNE, Germany, March 22.—(AP.)—The Cologne Gazette, says the amalgamation of Germany's two largest shipping lines, the Hamburg-American and the North German Lloyd, can be regarded as a fact, if the approval of the respective boards of directors is obtained.

The newspaper says the companies will amalgamate their interests for 50 years, each, however, remaining absolutely independent. The ships of the two lines will continue to sail under the old house flags.

The purpose of the agreement is said to be to place as many ships from each company as possible on important routes, thereby eliminating as far as can be done the construction of new steamers and enabling each company to develop new routes.

PARDON SOUGHT FOR CARREN

A petition signed by many residents of the Turtle Creek district will be presented to the State Board of Pardons, when they meet in Harrisburg, Wednesday, asking a pardon for Milton Carren, 46, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing employe, who is serving a term in the Western Penitentiary for the theft of a company payroll.

Nathan Beck, chairman of the East Pittsburgh borough council has been obtaining signatures on one of the several petitions circulated in the valley district.

Carren pleaded guilty to taking $15,000 from the company's payroll last January and was paroled. Two days after being released he is said to have threatened an official of the company and his parole was revoked. His term is from one and a half to three years in the penitentiary.

State College Chief Falls Dead at Fire

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 22.—(AP.)—Philip D. Foster, 65, former postmaster and fire chief of the Borough of State College, fell dead yesterday at a fire in the new power plant being erected for Pennsylvania State College. Foster, who was one of the organizers of the Borough Fire Company and has been fire chief for a number of years, succumbed to a heart attack.

The blaze caused little damage.

Forbids Charity From Sunday Movies

DOVER, March 21. — Mayor W. R. Stucky announced today that he had ordered the city charity board not to accept any more donations from proceeds of Sunday movies. A local theater, which donated $84.71 to the poor fund from proceeds of its last Sunday shows, announced it would donate again next Sunday.

MORE ANIMALS ARRIVE AT ZOO

Five elks, two from St. Louis and three from Detroit, arrived in town yesterday and were penned up in the Highland Park Zoo.

A year-old bull buffalo also arrived, making the total now six.

With the remodeling and restocking plans going on, the zoo will prove more interesting than before, according to James Moore, superintendent, and Ernest Tretow, custodian.

Last week the deer herd was enlarged. In a few weeks, outdoor pens will be erected and the animals will be allowed a measure of freedom. Now they're penned in a $17,500 structure, just being completed.

Woman Hit-and-Run Victim in Hospital

A hit-and-run motorist who struck Miss Elizabeth Allen, 38, of 5400 Howe street, while she was alighting from a street car at Fifth and Aiken avenues, last night, was being sought by police today. Miss Allen suffered concussion of the brain and lacerations of the scalp. She was taken to the Homeopathic Hospital.

Police learned that the car belonged to a resident of Meadville, they said.

Members Arrange Woodland Hike

Pittsburgh Hiking Club members will walk tomorrow from Home avenue, Avalon, through the glades and wooded paths from that point, they have announced. D. E. Batchelder, acting secretary of the organization, requests members to take street car Nos. 13 or 14, leaving Penn avenue at Sixth street at 1:45 p. m. for Home avenue.

APPEALS HEARD BY HIGH COURT

The question of whether an undertaking establishment in a residential district constitutes a nuisance and violated a city zoning ordinance was involved in the argument before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court yesterday in the appeal of Thomas E. McCann and others from a decision in Common Pleas Court refusing them an injunction sought against a neighbor, John J. McCabe, licensed undertaker, at 4825 Friendship avenue.

Other appeals from Common Pleas Court of Allegheny County argued before the Supreme Court were: Mildred Gable by Irvin Gable, against Yellow Cab Company, appellant; Thomas C. and Elizabeth Hughes, against Pittsburgh Transportation Company, appellant, and Glassport Trust Company against Dorothy Feightner, appellant.

85 PLASTERERS CONFER HERE

Eighty-five delegates from Delaware and Pennsylvania are in Pittsburgh today attending the third annual convention of the Pennsylvania and Delaware States Conference of Plasterers and Cement Finishers being held in the Hotel Roosevelt. President James McDevitt is in charge of the sessions.

James Blythe and Anthony Giordino, of Pittsburgh, welcomed the visitors at the opening session yesterday. General President Michael J. Colleran of the International Association and Vice President James M. Nyles, of Philadelphia, spoke. Resolutions were adopted for the six-hour work day as a basis for more equal distribution of employment, and giving moral support to the striking taxicab drivers.

8,000,000 Chinese Facing Famine Peril

NANKING, March 22.—(AP.)—Eight million Chinese peasants living in the 56 districts of Klanksi Province, South China, are suffering the terrors of starvation.

Banditry, floods and crop failures are held responsible. Loss of property through floods and banditry is estimated at $30,000,000. The crop failures are due to lack of rain.

Bread Line Draws Tramps, Welfare Workers Hold

The bread line method of relieving distress was branded as ineffective and demoralizing to the individual and community by social workers who met yesterday in the offices of the City Department of Welfare. Those in attendance are of the opinion that the established social agencies of the city have adequate facilities for food and shelter for all who are in need.

Mrs. Isabel B. Darragh, chief of the social service in the welfare department, presided at the conference. Representatives of a dozen organizations discussed the bread line problem after which the findings were issued.

Another finding of the group was that the bread line is likely to draw to Pittsburgh all vagrants in this section of the country and so complicate the local situation. One example to show the local agencies prepared to meet any emergency was given in the statement that the Improvement of the Poor provided free beds for more than 400 Thursday night, and could have accommodated 200 more. This agency served more than 1,000 free meals Thursday and could have served as many more as might have been needed, it was said.

Pitt Girl Wins Ad Club Aero Scholarship

Miss Ethel A. Anderson of 708 Homewood avenue has been chosen winner of the flying scholarship at the Penn School of Aviation, offered by the Women's Advertising Club of Pittsburgh. Proceeds of the annual ball given by the club went toward establishing the scholarship. Ground school training, dual instruction and solo flight are included in the course.

Miss Anderson is a graduate of the Meadville High School and now is in her senior year at Pitt. Yesterday she completed physical tests and was taken to the Pittsburgh-Butler airport for an air ride. Her instructions begin next June. The winner was selected over Miss Rita Overent and Miss Jean Boggs after she had passed the physical tests of the Department of Commerce with the highest rating. The trio were chosen by a committee of the club.

Mr. Dane Wields Hammer And Builds Himself One Garage

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

HOLLYWOOD, March 22.

IT happened. At the time Karl Dane took a house in Bev Hills. The big boy was once a carpenter. The hammer urge gets him even now, at times. It did in the Bev Hills mansion. Dane built himself a garage!

From the hoppity vaudvil touring of George K. Arthur comes word that the lad has composed a song. That Brunswick has recorded it and put Arthur under a year's contract. Bime by George returns to Hollywood and mayhap the flicks.

The friend smiled pityingly. "Not all the best people, my dear."

WHEN Eddie Lowe finished at college, he took along with him his much-prized freshman cap. He has kept that cap all these years. He uses it as a head covering every time he smears on the ole grease paint. If he ever lost that cap, he'd probably part with 10 years' peace.

Lawrence Tibbett, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company and Hollywood, gave a most astonishing recital and exhibition of good singing in Syria Mosque last night. Old friends of his music and new ones since his exhuberant film performance crowded the hall to overflowing and in his best spirit, Tibbett rewarded his admirers most generously.

J. Fred Lissfelt

It is so seldom nowadays that one meets such perfection of vocal technique, that in listening to Tibbett one is likely to be carried away with the sheer perfection of his voice before considering the music at all. But this singer forbids such neglect of his songs. He is too great an actor for that. Upheld by a superb intelligence, by deep musical feeling and reverence for his art, he makes each song obey traditional lines of music, but retouches every syllable with his own imagination.

It gave great joy to that vast audience to hear its own language so flawlessly sung, and there were songs of every character to please. If we are ever to respect our composers they must have such interpreters. It is true that many of their songs bear strong resemblances, but Rupert Hughes and John Alden Carpenter gave last night's program much originality. The "Bricklayer's Love" is about as fine a genre song as we may now boast, and the "Jazz Boys," with its broad touches of cabaret color, was just as subtle as Omar. Tibbett looked far beneath the surface of American life to give all he could to this music.

And if opera is old-fashioned, Tibbett showed us what we might lose by putting it on the shelf. His air from "Othello" was a tone portrait from Shakespeare. He followed it with that lovely apostrophe from "Tannhaeuser," the "Song to the Evening Star," as fluent an example of legato singing as we have ever heard, and only another proof that Wagnerian music may be sung.

Indeed, there was music of every age and nation, and a proper style for all. The "Verrat" of Brahms is the baritone's "Erlking," and much neglected. "Liebliche Wangen" only made us hope that when Tibbett returns he will bring us many more such. There were encores galore, two of his lyrics from his "Rogue's Song." Tschaikowski's "Why," old English and American character songs, and a very welcome "Road to Mandalay."

Stewart Wille was an excellent accompanist and contributed two brilliant piano numbers, with Debussy's "Clair de Lune" as encore.

Sewickley Student Justice at Vassar

Miss Mary Earnest Cooper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Cooper, of Sewickley, has been elected chief justice of the Vassar College Student Association. Miss Cooper is a junior in the college.

Her duties as chief justice include the hearing and passing on all cases of breach of college law.

Miss Cooper is expected to return to her home in Sewickley today for a short visit.

TWO STARS REUNITED IN HERBERT OPERETTA

Ilse Marvenga, who returns to Pittsburgh in the stellar role of "Naughty Marietta," another feature offering in the continuation of the Victor Herbert Festival in the Alvin opening with a matinee next Wednesday, was last seen and heard here in the prima donna role of "The Student Prince." Halfred Young, who plays opposite her in "Naughty Marietta," will also be remembered in association with Miss Marvenga in "The Student Prince," having had the title role.

Connie's "Hot Chocolate," a Negro musical revue, will be in the Nixon next week.

A modern Three Musketeers, composed of a vaudeville actor and two newspaper boys, are the principal characters in "Laff That Off," a comedy, which will be the attraction in the Pitt next week.

"SARAH AND SON"

"Sarah and Son," novel by Timothy Shea, forms the story basis for Paramount's feature picture of the same name, which comes to the Penn Monday. Ruth Chatterton, of "Laughing Lady" and "Madame X," is starred in the role of Sarah.

"Hit the Deck" opens today on the screen in the Harris. Jack Oakie and Polly Walker are featured. Dick Ware makes his debut as master of ceremonies on the stage.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, Hal Roach's famous comedy team, are making their first appearance in a feature production in "The Rogue Song," now playing in the Aldine. They appear as a pair of renegades attached to a band of singing bandits. Lawrence Tibbett is starred. The picture opens its second week Monday.

NEW FILMS TODAY

Beginning today the R-K-O Sheridan Square presents Richard Dix in his latest film, "Lovin the Ladies." The production is a comedy drama.

Warner Brothers latest all talking technicolor production, "Under a Texas Moon," opens in the Warner today. Frank Fay, the comical master of ceremonies of the "Show of Shows," has the leading role. Raquel Torres, Armida, Myrna Loy, Noah Beery and Tully Marshall are in the cast.

JAB

I TRUST you find the cavalier you seek,
The fair and faithful hero of your dreams;
But lads without a blemish or a streak
Of fickleness are rather rare, it seems:
It's very brave of you to aim so high,
And scorn the lesser gods with feet of clay,
I'd dearly love to make the grade but I
Was born with traits that lean the other way.
Suppose this gay and gallant knight comes by,
Possessed of all the virtues that you crave;
Can you advance a single reason why
He should consent to be your willing slave?
I know you well—and what I'd like to learn—
Is what you have to offer in return?

REPORTORIAL INACCURACY,

WE haven't read Rudy Vallee's book, but one of his fans asks if it is true, as the book asserts, that Fred Fisher had his first and last song hit in "Dardenella." Well, no. Fisher didn't write the ditty, it was written by Johnny Black and Felix Bernard. Fisher was the publisher. And Fisher wrote several hit songs long before and after "Dardenella" was born. Those grand songs included: "In Sunny Italy," "Daddy, You've Been a Mother to Me," "Lorraine," "Chicago, Chicago (That Toddling Town)," "Peg o' My Heart" and dozens of other memorable tunes.

IN PLAIN TUKK

LARRY LIPSKIN'S contrib for today concerns the little dialectician who was a waiter in a kosher restaurant in the Ghetto District. A customer called him over. "Wot kind a place is diss?" said the man, "you are waiting on everybody else befurr me. Ain't you got no system?"

"Say," was the reply as he shrugged his shoulder, "if I had a seesytem — would I be a waiter?"

SCENE

You discover the most unusual things in this town. The newest wrinkle is the Park Avenue speakeasy which has just built a flock of kennels in its basement to oblige several men of the neighborhood.

The innovation is the result of the insistence of wives and mistresses who urged their husbands or boy friends to "take Fido out for a walk." The men now beg for the privilege of taking the dogs out for an airing, but instead, they frequent the speakeasy. The hoochhouse proprietor decided on the kennels to encourage the extra business. And it is said that the men get so drunk they depend on the dogs to lead them home.

GAG

FRISCO tells of the toughest man he ever played poker with, many years ago. He was one of the West's hardest cowboy guys, long mustache, sombrero lid, chaps, high-heeled boots with spurs, and he always featured two long pistols in his hpisters. During a tense poker game the bad man suddenly whipped out a knife and plunged it through another fellow's hand, pinning the man's mitt to the table.

Then walking over to the victim the hard guy sarcastically chirped: "Pardner, if the ace o' diamonds ain't under your paw, ah'll apologize!"

HEHEHEH

Leave it to the free-from-columnists, comic strips-and-other doodads-N. Y. Times to offer the most amusing paragraph of the week. It concerns an alien who came up for naturalization and when the court asked him to name the President he replied: "Al Smith."

Several times the question was repeated and the same answer given. Finally the judge said: "Why do you think Al Smith is President?"

"Well," said the alien, "in the campaign the Republicans kept on saying that if Al was elected we'd have a stock market crash, unemployment, bread lines, more prohibition violation and crime waves. We've had them all, so I know Al must be President!"

MIAU!

TEXAS GUINAN says the reason she goes to all the first-nights in Chicago is to see what the ex-wives are wearing and whom the ex-husbands are bringing.

BY WAY OF REPORT

Among other "breaks" planned for Mr. and Mrs. General Public is one being plotted by a legislator. It will be a bill requiring newspaper to print their retractions in "space identical to and as prominent as the original statement." They say the bill has assurance of sufficient support to make it a law and will slide through the New York State Legislature during the last week of the session. In other words, the rag that says in three columns that you stole the money will have to devote three columns to saying that you didn't, when it is established that the theft was committed by two other felons.

NO WONDER

Among the unfailing attendants at the important First-Nights is a Mr. Mayer, an unobtrusive gent who always has an aisle seat in Row A. He has witnessed more premieres than any other person in New York, and never mixes with the audiences in the foyer between acts. Naturally, there is much curiosity about him. Two critics were wondering about him the other night. "He can't be a critic," gagged one, "because you never see him at the bum shows."

At that remark another person volunteered the information that the man was in the corset business.

"Ah!" ah'd the listener, "no wonder he comes to all the openings. What else has he to do?"

LITTLE JACK LITTLE, BIG GARY COOPER IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

They're fighting the Civil War over again down in the Stanley in a talkie, "Only the Brave." Gen. Grant is there, determined to fight it all if it takes all summer. Gen. Lee is there going through the surrender gesture in that historic Appomattox episode. And the lanky Gary Cooper is there—looking heroic in his movie uniforms—as a Yankee spy who wants to be captured.

But really our hero isn't so heroic. His reckless desire to be captured and to meet the inevitable firing squad is caused by a faithless woman as much as by patriotism. When he rides out to see the girl he left behind him and finds her in the arms of another man, he thinks life isn't worth living. But he changes his mind when he glimpses Mary Brian as a Southern belle.

COMES THE ARMY

The picture is not a serious war drama, but a comedy romance tending to farce. However, it gets off to an earnest, though misleading, start. It opens in panorama, like most movie wars do. There are the peaceful rural scenes, followed by a sky full of storm clouds. Then the war is on.

The best thing about the film is William LeMaire as a Confederate sentry.

AND SO TO THE STAGE

Jack Little, the little big star of radioland, makes an appearance on the stage. Clever he is at the piano and it is interesting to view him in person. But if you've heard him on the air, you've heard him in the Stanley.

Dick Powell's new Warner-Publix revue is "Aladdin's Revels." Powell and his band do a good job of that "Big Man From the South. Four rah-rah boys, who harmonize vocally, and a fellow, with a stepladder and a line of monkey chatter, catch the applause.

"HOT-FOOTIN' IT" HAS AMUSING BITS ON ENRIGHT STAGE

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

"Hot-Footin' It," the Enright theater's new stage production, is above the average. Not over long, the show is well-drilled, boasts too much of no one thing, offers enough dancing, enough comedy, enough singing to be entertaining.

Highlights is a dancing skit, "Black Marta," in which Jay Mills and his Enright Rockets do some mean stepping, and Bob LaSalle's comedy act. LaSalle goes over the top with a parody of "You're the Cream in my Coffee." He takes the second line trenches with a medley of parodies on other songs.

Mills doesn't contribute vocally to the entertainment, but makes up for it with admirable dancing.

A McKees Rocks lass of tender years, "Baby Rose Marie," plays the accordion and sings.

The moving picture feature of the bill is "Son of the Gods" which had its first run in Pittsburgh in the Stanley. In it Richard Barthelmess is a mouthpiece of some of the best philosophers. As the son of a wealthy Chinaman, he runs head first into racial discrimination. He and his supposed father pour out on the passive audience some gems of thought about racial prejudice.

I liked Constance Bennett.

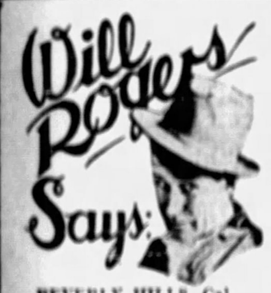
Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 22.

I can picture the great old man, Balfour, as I remember seeing him at the Washington disarmament conference in '22. You couldn't miss him. It was the professional diplomat, the trained statesman, just coasting along with a lot of amateurs. He could sink a blue print with more emotion than we could a battleship.

He knew that on account of England's numerous coaling stations all over the world that it was fast light cruisers they needed, so he with "great reluctance" agreed to limit battleships. But he thought it was up to us to make it a success. If we had to sink the Robert E. Lee, and did. Balfour was made "Lord" when he returned home for what he did here. I always thought he should have been made king.

Yours,
WILL.

Today's question: Will the Russian demonstrations against religion have a detrimental effect or will they merely start a trend, as evidenced by international prayer services, toward unity of all religions in a common cause?

MARTHA BUERKLE, Keystone Athletic Club, secretary: "I feel that the universal prayer service will help. It will bring them to time, all right, 'in union there is strength,' as the old adage says, and if the majority is against Russia, Russia'll calm down."

Miss Buerkle

EMMA JOHNSTON, North Side, stenographer: "I believe they'll all get together to fight Russia—morally, not physically, of course. But I don't think they'll ever merge into one religion—they're not built that way."

Miss Johnston

ANDREY AVINOFF, Carnegie museum, director: "This persecution is directed against the very core of the religious idea. They are persecuting every form of religion, not one especial sect. I think history teaches that every form of religious persecution developes a more staunch adherence to religion. From the present outlook, no brotherhood of religion will ever be formed. I consider the present policy of the Soviet in regard to religion is an outrage that has rightly aroused the indignation of the world."

Dr. Avinoff

MILDRED McCABE, Duquesne, typist: "No, it'll just 'ride.' Nothing will be done about it. Russia is off there alone and can do about as she pleases. No one will interfere with so strong a power on a matter like that."

Miss McCabe

JAMES HOWELL, East End, instructor: "I don't believe it's a religious question at all. It's an attempt by the Rusians to establish their economic order, which certain church organizations have opposed. If their economic order was established, they'd probably allow freedom of speech and religious freedom, the same as anyone else."

James Howell

DR. MAX SCHOEN, psychology department, Carnegie Tech, director: "I feel inclined to believe that the tendency today is towards the elimination of creedal distinctions. I'm inclined neither to condemn nor to praise what is going on in Russia, but I do believe that an attitude of open-mindedness and tolerance is becoming to all truly religious-minded individuals during the present period."

Barry Talks of Marriage If He Is Successful

CHAPTER XL.

"DID Ila get this chance for you?" A little smile curved at her lips, but her breath caught sharply. Almost with pain she watched his face.

"No—her father. Here, look out for that. It's wobbly—water inside. Say, woman, don't you show any interest in your lover's gift? Good one, too."

He took out his penknife and snipped the cords on the great, clumsy handle. Kneeling on the floor, he looked up to her: "Guess what it is. Ah—you're too slow. It'll be no more if I don't give it the air!"

Snickering, his face red, he pulled off the loose paper from a tall glass aquarium. Within, motionless as though carved in black stone, were two funny little water dogs and a long branch of green seaweed.

Chickie burst out laughing: "Of all the cuckoos! What in heaven's name makes you bring these slimy foundlings to my door?"

"Ain't they cute? I thought the capricious one would like them."

She knelt down beside them, watching the still creatures, fascinated by their immobility. "They must be dead."

"No, they've 'jest et' and they are sleeping."

He stirred the water with a pencil; they wiggled. "Ila had a jar of them in the sunroom. Seems they're all the rage. That gave me the hunch."

"Oh!" She wished to toss off carelessly. "Oh, you've been visiting Ila?" But her throat tightened. She repeated faintly. "Oh—"

He winked. "Yes—oh! And, oh, again! Too proud to ask when and how?"

"Tish! The door is always open. Go, when you will!"

"Ah—the fair one is jealous! She won't ask. 'How come?' "

He reached down for her hand, pulled her to her feet. But it's goody for us. We may get a real job out of it. I may marry the girl, yet! I mean you, frail. Will ye have me, and I can put a crust of bread in your mouth?"

"With butter?"

Barry Explains

"And sugar and jam! But not a damn word will you hear till you ask — till you say 'Please!' No, that's not enough. Say 'My darling Red, please tell me.' Say it."

So she did.

"Well, Ila's old man owns the Gulf Steamship Company. They have a regular staff of attorneys in New Orleans. They want a fellow here—not much responsibility yet. But I may land it. Tufts and Lennon are pulling the strings."

"But how did they come to think of you? Did Ila mention it to her father?"

He jabbed his elbow against her arm. "Not prickley at all, are we? It happened thusly: Going on four years ago, when I was young and innocent and just out of college, Moore had a case that Tufts and Lennon handled. They let me look up a few records. I met Moore. One day he gave me a lift to the ferry. Ila happened to be in the car at the time. We was acquainted and the lady was charmed with me. And after this and that, she invited me to their country place at Tahoe. Now you have the dark chapter in my life."

"And you had a regular kid case, did you?"

"Nope! Here sits my first and only genuine all-wool love!"

"Really, Barry? You mean that? But you haven't said a word about the job."

"Oh! We're ready to hear that now, are we? Other little matter all cleared up? Well—Moore came to Tufts and asked if he could recommend some clever young fellow, like me, just to look after their interests here. Does not amount to a great deal now, but growing. If I get it it will mean $150, maybe $200 a month, besides what I pick up on my own. Could we get by on that?"

Chickie Uneasy

She turned her face against him; in excess of gladness tears flew to her eyes, laughter to her lips: "On much less than that! I may take this for a bona fide proposal, sir? So sudden like!"

"It's a bona fide dream, all right. If it goes through there's nothing to it." He hesitated. "Of course, there's nothing very definite yet. I have to go up there tomorrow night. To Moores'. They asked me for dinner and there'll be a conference afterward. Tufts, too. Is that all right?"

She pinched the tips of her fingers to points. She didn't answer.

"So, sweet one, it wasn't all right for you and Jake? Is that what you're thinking?"

She laughed: "Maybe!"

"First time I ever knew the sun to be afraid of the yolk of an egg as a rival!"

"Ah — she's a great deal shinier than the yolks of a thousand eggs!"

"And don't you want me to look at her? Or be blind by her? I'm blind now. I don't see her at all."

"All right, then, you go—but don't look at her too hard!"

It was a little pointed claw digging at her happiness. She remembered piercingly the vision of Ila Moore, lovely and serene, like those pictures of St. Cecilia; remembered her standing at the bureau, lips parted, a radiant flush spreading over her cheeks when Barry came into the room, when he stopped abruptly, greeting her.

She remembered, too, that Ila was still awake when she came back from the pool, Barry's kisses warm on her lips; her heart gone out of her and all to him. Ila had wished to talk of him; she knew that; she had evaded.

Now she kept going over this — recalling each word. She thought, grudgingly: "He doesn't need to go for dinner. I should think they'd have conferences in the afternoon."

With each new twist her uneasiness mounted. Suddenly she was ashamed and laughed. How—if she couldn't hold him against Ila Moore—against all the world—well! Well—better know it, then! Leave the door open—let him go.

Worried About Ila

But as she fell asleep there came to her gently like a bright ray of sun the memory of him as he said in low, eager vibrance: "You two look alike? Let me see. Open your pretty eyes—ah!" And, his hands at her shoulders, had crossed down about her waist, drawn her to him. They looked with startled joy into each other's eyes. That night he told her how he loved her. And he said it again tonight. Said more—said with such boyish gayety: "Can we get by on that? I and the fair one!" So this was enough.

Yet she was intensely curious about that dinner. She stayed at home, reading idly through books of poetry he had given her. They were at dinner now. Was Ila sitting next him? What did she wear—some soft green thing that would make her an angel? And would they have time to talk afterward? She would lead him into the sunroom—show him her pets—ugly little water dogs. They gave Chickie the creeps.

Wildie came with tufted feet and spread himself on the floor, stretching his long head in her lap, blinking and gazing at her. She held his long nose in both her hands: "Good old Wildie! Love me! Love your pretty lady? Well, do! Who knows—I may need it."

Success—Elopement

But at lunch he told her all about it. Not much of a conference. Might be weeks before it was all settled.

She said with a merry laugh: "Did Ila whisper sweet things in your ear?"

"She did! The frails always do—the dear things!"

"What, for instance?"

"She's now at the stage where she has a grand passion for Nietzsche—super-stuff, you know! We talked of that and Plato and shall children be reared by doting parents or by the state. Such tender converse as that we had!"

"Nothing else?"

"Well, she asked of you."

"Oh—of course I knew it. I suppose she said in a very distant tone: "How is that pretty thing—Miss—what was her name—you know, your friend at the house party?"

Barry burst out laughing. "Oh—you cats! How you know each other!"

"Is that what she said?"

" 'Tis! And, sez I, ' 'Tis the dream of me life—me steady, ye speak of, Miss Moore? Well—she's prettier than that and her name is darling angel!"

"You did not!"

"All right! I'm a liar, then. But I think the thing is going through—"

"And then?" Her face overspread with scarlet—even her eyes mantling with shy joy "And then, Barry?"

He kissed her. "We'll elope—thee and me!"

Household Hints

Salt and soda mixed together and moistened with water will clean tarnished brass.

A little lemon juice sprinkled over sliced fresh fruit will keep it fresh looking and enhance the flavor.

Stains on tinware or teacups can be removed by dipping a damp cloth in common soda and rubbing briskly. Wash and wipe dry.

Once a month remove the slip-covers from your furniture and clean the furniture with the vacuum cleaner. Wash the covers if necessary and replace. This will enable you to keep the furniture in perfect condition.

THERE IS A GARDEN

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

THERE is a garden. A dream garden that haunts the person who grubs all day in the city. A garden withdrawn; an escape, a belief, an ambition. An escape by way of a faith in a better destiny than a lifetime in a dingy, treeless world of stone. Sitting at a table in a restaurant that has its doubles by the tens of thousands, its square of cloth a doubtful white, ironed like its millions of companions—crooked, served by a harried, indifferent waiter, who perhaps, weary of people and food, dreams too of escape, the man who grubs in the city thinks upon it! Outside the window a river of beings flows by and, like the river, seemingly forever. Everywhere noise like a colossal wrecker seems to be taking a whole world made of metal apart in a frenzy. The sky, somewhere a fine blue, is here fogged over. The air, once thin and clean, is heavy with the scent of gasoline, the favorite perfume of that bold Queen—the City. Around him others drift in and out, lunching in confusion, out-talking one another. And for a hundred faces that are commonplace, without ambition, is one that shows the mark of high dreams. For the one face, honest and true, of a simplicity and directness, are hundreds impressed by the devious desires of the city.

Watching, the grubber thinks. "This is not all my life, not all of my destiny. I will not spend all my days walking on stone, between stone, working in and living in stone, my only trees Central Park—however I do thank some long dead city-fathers for it and pray that the present ones may keep it up better than they do——! That face over there with heavily blacked eyes. They are not the eyes that I shall see look some day into mine, nor the fixed smile of the pretty girl in the armies of pretty girls in the front row of a musical comedy, my ultimate woman-smile that will shine on me! I have a dream; and there is a garden. A real garden: a real sky of blue; real perfume; and silence, broken only by the gentle music played by love. And in the garden is a pool: and a fair, kind woman bends there, looking in, waiting, for my face—even if it isn't that of Apollo—to appear beside hers.

"A fair woman, a garden, and love. Some day I will have that. But this I fear, like the poet, that if ever I do get these, the rest of the world will find out how happy I am, and will come and make a city there!"

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Finishes Her Story of Attack

I PUT my fingers upon Mary's lips, closing them gently as she told me of the disappearance inside the vacant buildings of the man who had attacked Noel.

"The rest of this you told me before, dearest," I told her. "You said that after Noel had been hit, he kept his hat on, and insisted upon walking into the hotel, and that he kept up until the elevator boy had left you at your floor and gone down again. And from the time he fell and you rushed to us for aid, I know as much as you do. So there is no need for you to speak of this, even to think of it, again. Noel will not be out of the apartment for a week or two, and, and I'm going to ask you not to go out of the hotel for a while unless one of the Underwood or Graham mixed doubles is with you. By the time Noel is well again, the young man whom your Uncle Dicky calls the 'capering cockroach' will be as effectively disposed of as if he were in realty one of those loathsome insects under a well-directed heel. Both your uncle and Mr. Underwood have very persuasive ways with them when dealing with gentlemen of Jack Leslie's kind, and I shall tell this whole story to Mr. Underwood very shortly. But just now, I'm going to cuddle you a bit. You need it more than anyone I know. Just relax as if you were Junior. There! that's it!"

"This has been wonderful, Auntie Madge, but I am perfectly all right now, and oughn't I to be getting back to Noel?"

"I want you to go back to Noel now, for I want the opportunity to tell this story to Mr. Underwood. Then, Mary, when you have satisfied yourself that Noel is resting peacefully, I want you to do something for me. You heard the physician say that Noel will sleep until morning. Mr. Underwood, with his ambulance experience is the only one capable of real aid if he should awaken and need any one. You will do Noel no possible good by remaining awake tonight, but if you will go to sleep like a sensible girl you will be refreshed tomorrow and ready to read to him or do anything else to aid Katherine in her care of him. I promise you that Mr. Underwood will call you if Noel wakens and either needs you or asks for you. Now will you promise me to go to bed after I have talked with Mr. Underwood?"

"I'd be a little beast not to mind you," she said childishly. "But you will make Mr. Underwood promise to call me, if it's necessary, won't you? Oh! I know you've promised me, but he's a man, and men are so superior about protecting women and all that stuff. But if he promises you, he wouldn't dare to break it."

"I'll make him 'cross his heart and hope to die,' " I told her, laughing, and with another impulsive hug, she rose from my lap, and, looking down with almost her old smile, held out a hand to me.

"I think it's my turn to play nurse," she said "You must be terribly cramped holding me."

"You forget I've had a lot of practice with Junior." I told her, and then we went softly back to the Underwood apartment, where we found Lillian reading and Harry sitting as we had left him, steadily watching Noel. He shot a shrewd glance at us as we came in, and at my reassuring nod, rose and came up to us.

"I haven't even blinked my eyes," he told Mary. "In fact, I doubt my ability to wink at a pretty girl, so stiff have my eyelids become. But I have kept faith with you and that is reward enough for me. And I have good news for you. Your young man hasn't stirred. He is sleeping as peacefully as—well insert the simile yourself, and now Lady Fair, what wouldst thou with me? I can see by the gleam of your eye that you have a job for me."

"I want to talk to you and Lillian for a few minutes," I said. "Mary will watch Noel."

Noiselessly the girl stole to her lover's bedside and sank down in the chair Mr. Underwood had quitted. As he turned with me toward Lillian, he muttered:

"Dirty work at the crossroads?"

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

GROWING in popularity is the fad for tinting the fingernails to match one's jewels. Green nails with emeralds. Deep red for rubies. Blue for sapphires. Doesn't matter whether the jewels are from the family gem casket or not; synthetic ones serve as well these days. For the frock of gold tissues there are gold polishes for those little pink-pearl finger sheaths, and silver glints for silver robes and booties. It is only when bright green polish is used that the gaping onlooker gets a dizzifying shock. It is as if the lovely one were starting to mildew.

Oatmeal is an excellent substitute for soap and a sweet solacement for the girl who has a tender skin, easily wind-burned and inclined to moult in flour-like particles. Mix the oatmeal half and half with almond meal. Moisten the washcloth, sprinkle on the meal and lave the face gently. Cornmeal, which is cheaper, is good enough for hands that don't like soap. It not only cleanses, but it heals a tender surface.

Ears should be powdered. The lobes should be touched faintly with rouge. Heavy earrings should have supports of fine wire than hang from the ear-tops. Earrings dangling to the shoulders are not so popular as they were, and the single pearl button is in greater vogue than ever, though it isn't so good for the moon-faced darling as pendants.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

For and About Wives

AS long as a man is in love with a woman, he won't argue with her; but when a woman won't bother to argue with a man, her love is dead.

* * *

It's real love, if your young husband can get the same thrill out of seeing you in a new spring hat for which he has just received the bill, as he did out of seeing you in the ones your father paid for.

Of course, a woman should have perfect faith in her husband; but even the Scriptures don't require that she should go so far as to let him select his own trained nurse.

* * *

The great advantage in being married to one man is that all the others immediately feel that they can come to your parties and pay you all those devoted little attentions—with perfect safety.

* * *

When a wife succeeds in convincing her husband that staying at home evenings is a duty, naturally, he ceases to regard it as a privilege or a pleasure.

* * *

Somehow, the public announcement of his engagement to marry always makes a man look and feel as foolish and self-conscious as though somebody had handed him a baby to hold.

* * *

A man can survive a heated quarrel with a woman; but what takes the heart out of him is her desire to warm it over, every day, for a week afterward—like the Christmas turkey.

* * *

Heat expands—and soon a man's heart will be expanding so under the warm spring moon that it will take half a dozen women to fill it.

* * *

Cold Eggs Best

A cold egg takes the best whipping. If you have not been able to chill the eggs thoroughly in the refrigerator before beating them, place them in cold water before breaking. Then keep the whites on ice or in a cold place up to the moment you are ready to beat them and you will find that it is a simple matter to whip them into a light froth.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Fine Art of Appreciation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell whether a young lady should thank the young man after he has taken her home from a dance? I am presupposing that the girl is not too intimately acquainted with the young man. If not, should the young man thank the girl for her company? B. S.

EACH should thank the other.

This is what well-bred people do after a party. The gentleman thanks the lady for the charm and delight of her companionship, and the lady thanks the gentleman for his kind invitation, for his hospitality and for the happy time that she has had. You see, these are very lovely things to thank for, and the expression of the appreciation should be as articulate and gracious as possible.

And it makes no difference whether or not the lady and gentleman know each other very well or very little. The expression of thanks does not depend on the degree of friendship; it depends on our capacity for the fine art of appreciation.

Checking the Lady's Wraps

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When at a dance does the gentleman take the lady's wraps to the check room and get it for her, or does the lady do these things herself?

ANXIOUS TO BE CORRECT.

THE lady does this herself. If the lady does not know where the check room is, the gentleman inquires, accompanies her to it, and makes arrangements where to meet her after they have both checked their wraps.

Be Either Formal or Informal

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN:

If I wear an evening gown, would it be correct for my escort to wear as a substitute for a tuxedo a dark navy suit, a white broadcloth shirt with a wing collar, and a black bow tie, black socks and oxfords?

S. S.

NO. You would be dressed formally, and "ne'er the two can meet," in appropriateness.

Pattern 1857

Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

One of the most charming models presented this season is here shown made of cotton fabric. The bolero effect created by the lapped bodice closing is smart indeed. The jacket effect is further carried out in the pointed joining of skirt flare and hip section. Short set-in sleeves are the vogue.

Pattern 1857 is stunning fashioned of pique or linen in the new rose or gold shades. White, of course, for later in the season is always effective. For wear under a top coat, crepe de chine might be used in plain color or a print.

Designed only for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 14 requires 3¼ yards of 36-inch material.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins carefully wrapped, or stamps, for each pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE wanted.

Our PATTERN BOOK of NEW SPRING and SUMMER STYLES is FIFTEEN CENTS, but only TEN CENTS when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to Sun-Telegraph Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Let Weather Decide Dress for Baby

I AM writing this on a railway train with snow all around and the therometer standing below zero. The sun is bright but it fails to melt the sparkling snow a single particle.

DR. COPELAND

But by the time this article reaches the public it will be springtime in parts of our country and approaching it in others. It will appear at a season when the young mother must exercise unusual care in watching over the welfare of her baby.

It is puzzling to know just how to dress the youngster on these first warm days. Perhaps one day will be cold and windy, raw indeed. The next may be bright and almost balmy. What should be done about the outer garments?

A baby ought to be out-of-doors three or four hours every day when it does not rain or snow. But of course there are two periods, morning and afternoon outings, so the mother does not get far from home. In the event of a sudden change in weather, it will be possible to get into the house almost immediately.

There are certain devices which every home where a baby is, should never be without. There should be a set of scales and at least one thermometer, one outside the window where it will be as a guide to the mother. By consulting the thermometer she will know how warmly the baby should be dressed.

May I say in passing that rain does not go away with the importance of an improvised outing. The infant should be wrapped up and placed in its carriage which is drawn up in front of an open window.

It is a mistake to dress the baby so warmly that it perspires. To do so is to invite trouble, the least form of which is chafing and chapping of the skin. Dampness of the intimate garments may result in a cold and that, in turn, might be the beginning of bronchitis or pneumonia.

I know what sacrifices are required to purchase the elaborate wardrobe a baby must have if it is to be protected properly during the changeable weather of springtime. But it is not safe to depend on one weight of outside clothing. There must be lighter garments as well as heavy ones.

It is important to keep in mind that the warm sun will make up in milder weather for what the heavy cloak and sweater garments do for the child on cold days. By exercising common sense in the dressing, the helpless infant will be spared much suffering. More than this, it may be spared serious illness.

Perhaps some of this advice might well be followed by grown-ups as well. There is a lot of recklessness in our manner of dressing. We think too much about style and convention in our choice of garments.

Of course I am not unmindful of necessity, too. It is not everybody who can afford to have several weights of overcoats or cloaks. But when it comes to the baby, every family is willing to make sacrifices to supply what is needed. That is why I venture to urge that there be such a modest assortment of out-of-door clothing that the dress may be suited to the temperature.

Horoscopes

Sunday, March 23

SUNDAY'S horoscope may not be read as a propitious one. There may be delays, setbacks and disappointments as well as personal anxiety and unpleasantness. The mental attitude may be morose and dejected.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year calling for fortitude, persistency and wise constructive effort, in both business and private affairs.

A child born on this day should be given an education to develop fortitude, determined effort and an optimistic attitude of mind.

Monday, March 24

MONDAY'S astrological forecast shows very lively progressive conditions with some auguries of the unusual or unplanned. All literary pursuits and kindred business, as well as employment, are under very encouraging prospects.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of activity and progress, especially if in employment or engaged in literary or kindred occupations.

'Public Improvements Promote Progress'
Convinced that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.
The Landscape Section of the Bureau of Roads was recently established for the purpose of beautifying by suitable landscaping the roadsides of the Allegheny County Highway System. The full advantages of this work will not be realized for a number of years, due to our very extensive road mileage and also because it takes years for small saplings to acquire maturity. In addition to improving and beautifying our highway system, planting shrubs will also prevent the washings and scourings of embankments by heavy rainfall and should consequently reduce road maintenance expenses.

RETAIL TRADE CONTINUES SLOW

Spring Weather Needed To Stimulate Demand; Building Outlook Good

The general business situation has not changed during the past week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Trade still continues below the seasonal average and considerable unemployment is in evidence. Settled spring weather is needed to quicken demand for seasonal merchandise and to stimulate construction work, of which there is quite a large amount in prospect. Retail trade continues quiet, and jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, dry goods and shoes report business still slow, although a slight improvement is noted. Sales of jewelry are somewhat better, although still lower than a year ago.

The movement of automobiles is still considerably below normal, being estimated at about 26 per cent below the first quarter of 1929. Building permits thus far this year have been much lower than for the same period of last year, although a number of large projects are expected to be started shortly and considerable public work will also be undertaken this year which will help the sale of lumber and other building supplies. The movement of groceries and provisions continues below normal with prices averaging lower than at any time since the war.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY

Industrial operations appear to be averaging slightly lower, with steel mills at about 74 per cent. Production of window glass continues at a low rate with practically no improvement in demand and prices unsettled. Production of plate glass is below the high average of a year ago, due principally to a much lighter demand from the automobile industry.

Manufacturers of electrical equipment are maintaining operations at a very fair rate, while producers of sanitary equipment, plumbing supplies, and radiator equipment report business quiet. Some increase is noted in crude oil production, although further efforts are being made to reduce the output.

COAL OUTPUT OFF

Production of bituminous coal shows a slight reduction, with demand very quiet, and prices continuing low and unsatisfactory to the producers. Western Pennsylvania grades of run of mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines, as follows—steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.30 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 cents to 90 cents and gas slack $1.00 to $1.10.

OFFERING NEW TYPES OF SERVICE

AMBASSADOR APARTMENT BUILDING, LOCATED AT 4733 CENTER AVENUE, BELLEFIELD

WARD COMPANY MERGED

The Hunter Machinery Company, one of the largest distributors of construction equipment in the United States, with plants at Milwaukee, Detroit and Grand Rapids, has purchased the Ward Equipment Company, 6617 Hamilton avenue, Pittsburgh, and has completed a merger into a new corporation known as the Hunter Machinery Company of Delaware.

This company has been the exclusive distributor for many well known manufacturers in Wisconsin and Michigan for many years, including the Blaw Knox Company, Chain Belt Company, Clyde Iron Works and 35 other manufacturers. The Hunter Machinery Company owns its own land and buildings at each point, including offices, display rooms, shops, parts rooms and storage buildings. It owns and carries a huge stock of new and rental machinery and parts. Sales run between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 a year. Capital is over $1,000,000.

CONTAINS 71 APARTMENTS

The Ambassador Corporation, operating the Ambassador Apartments at 4733 Center avenue, is making every effort to add to the usual service which people expect in modern apartment buildings. One of the unique services is the repairing of furniture which may become broken or damaged in its use around the apartments. This service is gratis to the tenants.

The building was recently completed and is of two-tone brick, tan and buff, trimmed in gray Indiana limestone. It contains 71 apartments of two and three rooms which rent for $80 to $130 a month. The kitchens are furnished with domestic science units and are finished in green. The baths are modern both in equipment and finish. A 60-car garage is operated in connection with the building.

Subsidiary Formed By Aircraft Corp.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Consolidated Aircraft Corporation has organized under laws of Canada, the Fleet Aircraft of Canada, Ltd., as the Canadian subsidiary. Construction of Canadian plants at Fort Erie, Ontario, is under way and contracts call for occupancy by May 1.

Oil Well Shows Gain In Earnings

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

IN spite of the large write-offs made by Oil Well Supply Company, the annual report indicated that the company has made substantial progress towards re-establishing its operations on a satisfactory basis.

Net profit for 1929 of $1,072,491, after charging off depreciation and making provision for bad debts and obsolete stock, was equivalent to $1.55 a share on the 389,948 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends. This was the largest profit in three years. It compared with $278,828 or $4.26 a share on the 7 per cent preferred stock in 1928 and with $490,505 or 5 cents a share on the common in 1927.

The charges for bad debts and obsolete stock made against 1929 earnings amounted to $708,741.

BESIDES the write-offs made against the year's operations the company charged $3,525,516 against surplus as a provision for bad debts, customers' claims and obsolescence. This item represents deductions which the present management believes should have been made against earnings of formr years. During the past two years the company has made widespread changes in its operating policies. The new management has taken drastic steps to eliminate all doubtful assets from the balance sheet and has put accounting systems in operation which should prevent the necessity of making such large charges in the future.

To further eliminate all doubtful values $710,000 in addition was deducted from surplus to reduce the estimated realizable value of real estate and equipment which is being held for sale. Another provision of $193,523 was made to reduce securities owned to the estimated marked value.

Book Value $31.50

IN all Oil Well Supply charged $4,429,039 from surplus in addition to the amounts deducted from the year's earnings. After paying preferred dividends total surplus was reduced from $6,471,641 at the close of 1928 to $2,718,252 at the end of 1929. Even after this reduction the book value of the common stock was in excess of $31.50 a share.

The past year was the second in which Oil Well has made widespread adjustments in the book values of its assets. At the close of 1928 $2,195,482 was written off for similar reasons to those given in the report just made public.

Acquired Wilson-Snyder

ONE of the outstanding developments in 1929 was the acquisition of the Wilson-Snyder Manufacturing Company of Braddock, Pa. This company manufactures slush pumps used in rotary drilling, hot oil pumps for refineries, oil pipe line pumps and Erie Ball engines. The organization proved to be very profitable last year and extended Oil Well Supply's line to include refinery equipment.

In order to obtain greater efficiency and to reduce general operating expenses, the engineering, purchasing and other closely allied office departments were moved to Oil City, Pa. This reduced the amount of office space required by the company in downtown Pittsburgh.

The only funded debt outstanding is an issue of $850,000 of Wilson-Snyder debenture 6s which mature serially to 1941. There is also an issue of $100,000 of Wilson-Snyder 7 per cent preferred outstanding in addition to $9,748,700 of Oil Well 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

Current assets on December 31, 1929, amounted to $19,925,146 against current liabilities of $5,940,500. Cash amounted to $2,824,611. Physical properties were carried at $6,502,618. Total assets were $27,287,436.

BUILDING TRADE ON UPSWING

NEW YORK, March 22.—Reflectors of basic industrial activity in the United States continue to give evidence that business is marking time, but in a few weeks is likely to fall in and catch on to the more lively rhythm of spring, says The Business Week, in its report covering the week ending today.

Steel activity continues to cool off, and carloadings are not picking up fast enough to warm up the rails or the earnings reports of the railroads. Nor, judging by bank debit figures, has there yet been enough vigorous exercise in writing of checks to stir up much faster circulation of money outside stock-trading centers. And for those who haven't check books the increase in employment is still too slight to afford much exercise and stimulate any great appetite for goods.

But building is definitely on the upswing, and open weather will bring increased opportunities for outdoor work and greater demands upon many lines of industry. Federal and local governments are clearly working in close harmony to push public work, which is already at the highest level in years. With commodity prices evidently nearing their bottom, the wholesale dollar nearly 10 cents above par, and money offered for a song, it should not be long before business generally will feel inclined to take a chance and join in the more cheerful chorus which the stock market is leading.

STEEL TRADE TURNS FOR BETTER

Unseasonable Decrease In Demand Ended; Buying Rate To Gain

By B. E. V. LUTY

Perhaps in celebration of the advent of spring the steel trade has shown a favorable turn this week. An actual upturn in the volume of demand is not yet definitely visible, but the curious, because unseasonable, decrease in demand that continued since the fore part of February seems clearly to have ended.

The volume of demand from week to week cannot be precisely measured but as buying is nearly all for very quick shipment it comes out promptly in the rate of steel ingot production, which reached a high point at the middle of February at fully 85 per cent of present capacity while the rate in the last week has been 76 to 77 per cent, representing a total drop of about 10 per cent in the tonnage, averaging 2 per cent a week for the five weeks, but the decrease in the last week has been trifling, some districts fully holding their rate. No increase is to be expected until there is a definite increase in buying, which is reasonably and naturally predicted in many quarters on the ground of seasonal increase in requirements as the favorable time for outdoor work has been reached.

LOCALS AT 65 PER CENT

Each of the two largest interests in the Pittsburgh district is understood to be running at 65 per cent on the basis of ordinary finishing capacity. Ingot production would be at a higher percentage since there is always, and properly, an excess of steel finishing capacity over steel making capacity. Production of standard rails in the district is now up to a full rate and that is the case also in the Chicago district.

Fabricated structural steel lettings as currently reported in the trade since the first of the year have been showing slight decreases from one year and two years ago. The official monthly reports are of opposite tenor, for with 252,000 tons reported for January and 292,000 tons just reported for February there is a slight gain over the same months of last year and 15 per cent gain over 1928. Perhaps the showing is not entirely conclusive, however, as the February returns were not complete. It is quite certain there has been nothing like a material decrease, which is remarkable considering the common talk. An item in this connection is that fabricated work for months past has run chiefly to large jobs. The small fabricating shops have not been well supplied with work and too much attention has probably been paid to this. The industry as a whole entered the year with about five months of work, at a high rate, on books, and as shipments in January and February, computed at 548,000 tons, exceeded bookings by only 4,000 tons, there is as good an order book now as at the beginning of the year.

AUTO PRODUCTION

February automobile production as officially reported is 5 per cent under the preliminary statement of early this month, cars and trucks, United States and Canada, totaling 339,510, according to the official report. This is 20 per cent over January and 32 per cent under February of last year, while it is less than 2 per cent under the average of February in the five years preceding. A fairly promising pace of revival is shown by the bare figures, but conditions are not really as favorable as thus indicated for two reasons, because this month has not been showing normal gain over February and because production is chiefly of light cars, thus not supplying steel tonnage in keeping with the statistics of number of units made.

The finished steel price situation leaves not a little to be desired. While there have been no outright declines of any consequence in open market quotations in the last 60 days, prices in some lines are not as steady as they were two or three weeks ago, by way of concessions formerly applicable only on very special orders having now a wider application. Also the desired advance in black and galvanized sheets for second quarter delivery has not eventuated. Some contracts have been made at the advanced figures, but such contracts are not effective in drawing out specifications when the general market has not responded.

SPECIALIZING IN SMALL LOANS

By-Product Coke Output Up In February

Due largely to an improvement in the iron and steel industry, the daily rate of by-product coke production showed further signs of recovery during February. Beehive production, on the other hand, failed to reflect the improved conditions and remained practically unchanged at the low level reached in January.

The total quantity of by-product coke produced in February amounted to 4,004,217 tons, a daily average of 143,000 tons. Although this was somewhat less than in the corresponding month of last year, the decrease was entirely accounted for by the furnace plants, the production at merchant plants being 4.5 per cent greater than in February, 1929. In comparison with the previous month the daily rate of by-product coke production in February shows an increase of 5.7 per cent.

TUBE COMPANY ON FULL TIME

AMBRIDGE, Pa., March 22.—The Central Tube Company has resumed in full after several months' part-time operation.

Orders received will maintain the plant at full speed for several weeks, it is said.

Ford By-Products Business Is Higher

DETROIT, March 22.—Sales of by-products business of Ford Motor Company during 1929 were $19,344,773, compared with $16,774,672 in 1928, an increase of $2,570,100. In addition to sales, by-products valued at several million dollars were used in the company's own manufacturing processes, officials stated.

GLASS MARKET IMPROVES

The American Glass Review says:

While comparative seasonal quiet still prevails in the window glass market, the demand this week evidenced some improvement. The new business being placed includes relatively few large orders, however, and is confined almost wholly to the early and immediate needs of the jobbing trade. Not only were orders in some larger volume, but a sizeable increase in inquiries, always a favorable sign, was reported by several leading factors.

Production of this commodity continues at virtually the same low levels as for some weeks past and the total output of the factories during March is likely to run slightly less than 500,000 boxes. Both output and distribution of window glass in the initial quarter of the year will run well below that of the corresponding period of 1929. While indications now appear more favorable for increased activities during the coming quarter, it is problematical as to whether the business to be booked by both the manufacturers and distributing trade will equal the volume for the second quarter of last year.

Demand for plate glass is likewise seasonably quiet, especially so as contrasted with the record volume of this time a year ago. With indications pointing to greater activity the coming month in the automobile industry, the demand for this product should show an early improvement, however. Despite the lessened demand the plate glass market is holding steady, with the price situation in this branch much better than in the window glass section of the flat glass trade.

Miller-Goodrich Merger Opposed

AKRON, O., March 22.—C. Ewart, owner of 75 shares of Miller Rubber Company preferred stock, has filed a petition for an injunction to prevent the sale of Miller Rubber Company to the B. F. Goodrich Company through an exchange of securities.

Ewart claims that the preferred certificates provide that in event of sale of the Miller company the preferred stock is to be paid in full. He asks that all action taken by Miller and Goodrich directors and stockholders for consummation of sale be vacated and set aside.

LOWER RATES OFFERED

The Pittsburgh thrift plan of small loans was devised to make payment easy from small to average incomes. It includes three different methods of loan, so that any borrower may find a plan adapted to his particular needs and circumstances. Each method carries a lower interest charge than any similar method used by other loan companies. Up to $300 may be loaned.

If the customer can put up, as collateral, bonds or stock in any well-rated company, he can borrow on his own signature. He need not own real estate, and no indorsers are required. This class of loan was devised especially for small investors, who through this plan are enabled to acquire valuable securities easily and conveniently. By the investment loan plan, if all payments are made promptly, $100, repayable in 10 monthly installments, costs only $8.25; repayable in 15 monthly installments, $12; and, repayable in 20 monthly installments, $15.80.

Loans where furniture is pledged are made for periods of 10 and 20 months. The customer pays the principal back in 10 or 20 equal instalments, with interest on unpaid balances. Large cash discounts, deducted at time of payment, are allowed for punctual payment. Under this plan, if all payments are made on due date, a $100 loan, repayable in 10 monthly instalments, costs $12.35; repayable in 20 monthly instalments, $23.55.

In any of these classes, when the loan is made, the borrower receives the entire amount of his loan, without any deductions or discounts whatsoever.

WEST. ELECTRIC INVESTMENTS INCREASE

Holdings Of Associated Companies Increased 200 Per Cent; Report Shows

NEW YORK, March 22.—Aside from establishment of new records for orders booked, sales billed and net income last year, perhaps the most important accomplishment by Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, from the standpoint of finances, was the increase of more than 200 per cent in stock holdings in associated companies. Totaling $26,115,844 at the end of 1929, such investments showed a gain of $18,107,709 over a year earlier.

Principal increases in these investments during 1929 were its 20 per cent stock interest in the RCA Victor Company, Inc., and in the RCA Radiotron Company, Inc., both of which were organized late last year. Westinghouse also participated in the financing of General Motors Radio Corporation by purchasing an interest in the latter's capital stock.

RADIO POLICIES

The formation of the RCA companies was brought about with a view to unifying the manufacture and sale of radio receiving sets and radio tubes. These companies took over certain properties, patents and assets formerly owned by Westinghouse and associated companies. The effect of this change on Westinghouse's operations will be to remove from its operating statement the income and expense incidental to the manufacture of radio appliances, and to substitute therefore additional income from investments.

Another feature in the rearrangement of the radio business will be the entrance of Westinghouse this year in the marketing of Westinghouse radio receiving sets which will be manufactured by the RCA Victor Company, Inc.

FOREIGN INVESTMENTS

Other changes were made also in foreign investments last year, the Westinghouse Electric International Company purchasing minority interests in certain companies in France and Italy engaged in the manufacture of electrical apparatus. In addition to income from these investments, Westinghouse also will receive license fees for use of its patents and for furnishing technical information. In each case a minimum payment is required in the arrangement.

Westinghouse Electric Company of Japan, a selling organization, is being liquidated and a license agreement has been consummated with Japanese interests who will act as import distributors for Westinghouse products in Japanese territory. This agreement extends over a period of years and provides for payment of annual fees to Westinghouse Electric International Company.

WILLIAM S. LEY

SHOWS RAPID GROWTH

William S. Ley, superintendent of agencies for the Knights Life Insurance Company, brought a tour of visits to the organization's district offices to a close at a joint meeting of all of the superintendents, assistant superintendents and agents at a meeting last Saturday.

Knights Life on March 17, 1917, issued Policy No. 1 in the industrial department, and, in the fall of 1918, broadened its field of activities by issuing also ordinary life insurance policies on the annual, semi-annual and quarterly payment basis.

The remarkable record achieved since 1917, by this company is one that has not been surpassed by any other insurance company in the country.

This well known Pittsburgh company has grown from a capital and surplus of less than $250,000 in January, 1917, to an institution having assets of over $3,500,000.

Use Neville Poco-Mixed Coke

Phone your dealer and tell him you want to try this better Coke. It is clean and odorless, gives intense heat and leaves very little ash.

If your dealer can't supply you promptly phone our city office—ATlantic 2200.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENTS IRREGULAR

Bull Pools Continue to Bid Up Some Specialties As Bears Attack Others

NEW YORK, March 22.—(AP.)—Further irregularity in price movement developed at the opening of today's stock market as bull pools continued to mark up some specialties while bearish professionals were renewing their attacks on others. J. I. Case advanced 2 points and Sears Roebuck and Dupont each showed initial gains of about a point.

Gillette Safety Razor opened with a block of 7,000 shares at 87½, up 3⅜, which contrasts with yesterday's low of 81½. National Cash Register opened with a block of 5,000 shares at 65 off 1⅜, and a new 1930 low. U. S. Steel common opened with a block of 6,000 shares at 190⅝, off ⅛.

Price movement continued mixed throughout the early trading with the motors, oils and coppers showing the best evidence of group strength, while the merchandising and railroad equipment shares showed several points of weakness. The sharp rise in prices of many issues during the last week led to extensive profit taking by professional traders, who felt that the market position of many issues had been weakened by the rise.

Houston Oil, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Hershey Chocolate, United Aircraft, Congoleum, Checker Cab, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Vanadium Steel and Mack Trucks all registered new 1930 high prices in the first half hour, the gains ranging from fractions to 4 points.

Liggett & Myers B, Peoples Gas and U. S. Industrial Alcohol recorded early gains of 2 points or more.

National Cash Register extended its loss to 3⅜ points by touching 62, which contrasts with the low of 59 established in the November break. Simmons sold down 3 points to a new at 45. American Machine and Foundry dropped 4½ points and Westinghouse Electric, Underwood-Elliott-Fisher and a few others sagged a point or more.

Petroleum Corp. Directors Meet

Directors of Petroleum Corporation of America will meet on March 24, a meeting scheduled for March 17 having been postponed due to lack of a quorum.

Company was organized in January, 1929, and net earnings for 1929 were $3,752,530, after all charges, equal to $1.15 a share on 3,250,000 shares outstanding. On December 31, last, an initial quarterly dividend of 37½ cents was paid, placing stock on an annual dividend basis of $1.50.

Book value of stock as of December 31, last, was $31.75 a share. Current market value is about $22.50 a share.

Cleveland-Cliffs Acquires Steel Co.

Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company has acquired controlling interest in the capital stock of Corrigan-McKinney Steel Co.

Corrigan-McKinney has an annual capacity of approximately 1,000,000 tons. The purchase is expected to result in eventual inclusion of the company in the new Republic Steel Corporation.

Petroleum Stocks Gain in February

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—American Petroleum Institute announces total production of crude oil in California for February, 1930, amounted to 20,885,660 barrels. Total stocks Pacific coast territory, end of February, 189,698,723 barrels, an increase of 3,352,220 barrels for the month.

Steel Corporation Report Reveals Very Strong Financial Status.

THE shorts in United States Steel did not derive much comfort from the publication of the pamphlet report of the corporation which showed an unusually strong financial position despite the many important operations in the past year. There was an increase of more than $24,400,000 in the unappropriated surplus in the face of rather heavy deductions. Cash, etc., amounted to more than $130,000,000, or about $9,000,000 in excess of total current liabilities. This year the corporation will have the benefits of the bond retirements, which will mean good earnings for the common stock, even though total net is smaller than last year. Covering in Steel common has been active.

Investment trusts are credited with having been large buyers of Standard Oil of New Jersey in the past week or so. This demand may be due to the growing belief that those directing the affairs of the oil industry will continue to be successful in their efforts to improve the situation in the industry. Standard of New Jersey would naturally be one of the popular oils on any increase in speculation in the group.

ACTION of United Carbon at times since late last week has indicated that persistent buying has been based on something more than the importance of the current rate of earnings or the possible improvement in the outlook for the carbon black industry. Demand has come from some of the strongest houses in the Street and the buying has been considered significant enough to attract a following from the speculative trading element.

Strength of American Can in the past always has resulted in rumors of a split-up, and the latest advance was no exception in this connection. Officials of the company have not made any statement on the matter, but those in a position to have excellent information are not anticipating a split-up at this time. There has been strong buying in the stock from important houses which often have executed orders for leading banking interests in the past.

ENORMOUS growth in the electrical industry has been reflected in the increase in sales and earnings of General Electric in past years and indications are the trend will continue upward. The stock is one of the popular investments for outsiders who give more attention to prospects for enhancement in principal than they do to current yield. Small lot buying has been on a large scale in the past few months.

The outstanding disclosure in this week's Federal Reserve statement is the heavy contraction in the system's holdings of open market bills. Its portfolio shows a shrinkage of no less than $71,500,000, to a total of $185,017,000 as contrasted with $236,000,000 this week last year. This development, it would seem, explains the veritable collapse in bill rates recently, indicating as it does that new paper is not coming out near as rapidly as old bills are maturing. The reserve added about $46,000,000 government securities, but a reduction of $61,000,000 in rediscounted bills brought a net cut of $89,000,000 in the total amount of Federal Reserve credit in use during the week, and left the total about $411,000,000 under the corresponding date last year.

March Promises to End Better Than It Began.

By B. C. FORBES

MARCH'S farewell promises to be cheerier than its debut. Business appears to be a trifle more buoyant, employment is declared to be picking up at least slightly, farm prices have stopped hitting new lows, money rates have drastically declined in leading centers, while Wall Street is doing its best to dispel the gloom of winter and to celebrate the arrival of spring.

MANY outside of Wall Street are puzzled when they read that day to day, or call, loans are being made in New York at such quotations as 2 per cent and even 1½ per cent, and that time money is freely offered 3¾ to 4 per cent. They themselves, when they try to borrow money, are asked to pay very much higher rates.

This extract from one out-of-town letter is typical:

"I would like to know where you can get some of the 'cheap' money you financial writers are writing about. I have been paying 6 per cent on a loan secured by plenty of good New York Stock Exchange collateral and have been compelled to maintain a $5,000 balance in my account. I have talked this matter over with a banker friend and he tells me that the banks in New York, particularly the larger ones, have loads of money but lend it only to people who keep large balances. He also says that his own bank is still paying 5½ per cent to a New York bank.

"I am sure thousands of people would like to know why this is done and where they can get this 'cheap' money to buy homes, and so on, which the government really wants people to do to aid prosperity. Send someone to one of your large New York banks to try to get a loan at the rates quoted in the daily newspapers and see the result."

I can sympathize with the writer. Having occasion to renew a demand loan the other day, one bank voluntarily reduced the rate from 6 to 5½ per cent, but when I asked another bank, where I was paying 6 per cent, to make a reduction, I was told that the banks were anxious to reduce their collateral loans and that the 6 per cent rate would have to stand. It still stands.

The money rates quoted in New York, it should be explained, apply to large borrowers, usually brokers. Call loans—so named because they can be called any day—ordinarily are made in very large sums by banks to brokerage houses. Brokers carry big accounts with their banks.

The lowest rates quoted for time money—so called because the money is borrowed for a specified time, anywhere from 30 days to six months—also represent Wall Street transactions, and do not represent rates charged by banks to ordinary borrowers of moderate amounts.

Anyone doing business with a broker need not expect to be charged the minimum rates quoted daily. It is well known that brokers figure on making a profit on the rates they charge their customers. They borrow by the wholesale, so to speak, and lend at retail. They claim that it is perfectly legitimate for them to charge a profit for this service.

At a time like this banks throughout the country should exert themselves to do everything possible to encourage not only home-building but every other healthy form of enterprise and activity. The employment thus created is very direly needed.

TURN about is fair play. Europe has been invaded by American motor manufacturers. Now the tiny Austin car, so popular in Britain, is to be manufactured at Butler, Pa. It will have only seven horsepower, contrasted with Ford's twenty-four and Chevrolet's still higher figure. Whether Americans will take to these "perambulators," as they are sometimes called abroad, remains to be seen.

I UNDERSTAND that merger negotiations between the Dollar Line and the American Hawaiian Line have now reached a promising stage and that the big deal is likely to go through. But it has not yet been signed and sealed.

American shipping is enjoying an encouraging revival after its long, discouraging spell. The current here, as in other industries, is flowing strongly toward combinations. The year will doubtless bring important developments.

IT is not too late to find attractive investments in both bonds and stocks.

COL. SAMUEL M. EVANS

EVANS FUNERAL TOMORROW

Col. Samuel M. Evans, 86, Civil War veteran, who died yesterday, will be buried tomorrow from the Samson mortuary, Neville street, at 3:30 p. m. The services will be simple.

Col. Evans, custodian of Memorial Hall since 1917, was a leader for many years in veteran organizations. He enlisted in the Civil War at the age of 17. He was a sergeant at the time of his discharge. He was also prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity.

He leaves three children, Olive L. and Carroll D. Evans, of this city, and Mrs. Lydia Devlin, of Conemaugh, and a brother, Dr. Carroll Evans, of Columbus, O.

Obituary

William J. McCready.

SHARON, Pa., March 22.—William J. McCready died at his home in South Oakland avenue after an illness of three weeks. He was born in Scotland and had lived in Pittsburgh previous to his moving here 15 years ago. He was employed at the Sharon Steel Hoop Company plant.

He leaves his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth McCready, of Sharpsburg; one sister, Mrs. Martha Christ, of Fremont, Tex., and three brothers, David, and James McCready, of Sharpsburg, and Charles McCready, of Etna, Pa.

The body has been taken to Sharpsburg for burial.

Shaw Funeral.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon for Joseph H. Shaw, 78, alderman of Duquesne, who died in his home, 204 South Fourth street, that city, Thursday night. Mr. Shaw had been alderman in Duquesne for 26 years. The funeral services will be held in the First Christian Church, Duquesne, at 2:30 o'clock and burial will be in Richmond Cemetery, Dravosburg. Before becoming alderman, Mr. Shaw was employed by the Carnegie Steel Company. He leaves his widow; two sons, three daughters, a sister and a brother.

Mrs. Homer D. Butts.

Mrs. Elsie Hamann Butts, of 5646 Hobart street, wife of Homer D. Butts, died yesterday in the Magee Hospital. She was born in New York but had lived in Pittsburgh many years. She was a member of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer. Beside her husband she leaves a son, Dr. Homer D. Butts, Jr., and a sister, Mrs. William McMurray, of New York.

Davis Funeral.

Funeral services were to be held today for Louis Davis, 62, of 2316 East street, North Side, who died in the Allegheny General Hospital, Tuesday, from the funeral parlors of Herman and Son in East Ohio street. Mr. Davis was a member of the Queen of Heaven Catholic Church. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Mary Davis; a son and two daughters.

Midland Steel Co. Orders Expanding

CLEVELAND, March 22.—Orders from the automobile industry are showing definite signs of increased activity and Midland Steel Products has received a good volume of business during the past two weeks, according to E. J. Kulas, president. Each month this year, he said, has shown improvement over the preceding month and from orders on hand operations of Midland during April will be around 85 per cent of capacity.

A.T.&T. Employes Offered Stock At $150

NEW YORK, March 22.—American Telephone and Telegraph Company will sell to employes additional stock at $150 a share in the ratio of one share for each four held, and for which payment can be made in part by assignment of dividends.

THE WHITE HOUSE GANG

By Earle Looker

Vengeful Gangsters Annoy Government Workers

Theodore Roosevelt, when President of the United States, started the adventurous, rollicking, joyous career of the White House Gang by sending his youngest son, Quentin, to the Force Public School in Washington. Here the gang was recruited. The accredited members are Charles (Taffy) Taft, "Brom" Seeley, Dick (Sailor) Chew, Edward (Slats) Stead, also called "Bedstead," Walker White, "T. R.," the most active member of the gang; Quentin, the leader, and Earle Looker, the author of this story.

Each day, after school, the gang went into a huddle to confound all rules of deportment in high places, mingle in the lives of presidents and policemen, win victories, taste honor, suffer punishments and engage in escapades which were swept along the wires to national publicity. Many exploits of the gang, however, either remain unknown or were known only to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Some there were securely hidden even from them.

CHAPTER XVI.

AT Various times, Q and the rest of us had various ways of apprehending what we deemed to be our rights. Theories of ownership are not at all set in boys' minds—and we followed each, with considerable fluctuation. At first, the rights of a thing were held to belong to that member of the Gang who made a discovery and, four times out of six, that was Q.

Later untroubled possession went to him whose effort had contributed most to whatever was under way, and that, oftener than not, was Charlie Taft. Finally, these wise and progressive laws were abandoned, and that because of violent dissension, whereupon we reverted to anarchical award, the prize going to the one who was quickest and loudest in making his claim. The eventual conclusion took the form of a sort of communistic ownership.

Following the usage of all history, this speedily and inevitably involved ownership of everything. And here, for a time, we were unopposed. The White House staff was glad to have children about, even to the extent of practicing what is known as "looking the other way." Under these conditions, it was only natural that we should have come to think a good deal of ourselves, and to proceed, by actual trial, to discover just how far we could go, before being challenged. Q, who needed to be picked on by his older brothers at breakfast, in sheer self-defense, and in order to subdue his exuberance into the promise of manageability for the prosaic duties of the day, even went so far as to suggest—seeing that everything in sight was ours—that we ought to use the Washington Monument for a sundial to tell the time by. This suggestion was conceived, undeniably, upon a grand and magnificent scale; it was worthy of a Grand Monarque—a la Louis Quatorze, but, needless to say, we could do nothing with it. But the State-War-Navy Building, although immensely bigger and in no way beautiful, lay closer at hand, and seemed to belong to us more intimately. Q had made many friends there, from the three secretaries down. He was given to making sudden, unannounced calls upon them and, as he was always received with full official honors, enjoyed it hugely, and gave his father, as he told us, "accurate accounts." Long years before the phrase was invented, Q was a sort of good-will ambassador, between these department heads and the Chief Executive.

Shadow Disappears

One Saturday, therefore, just before noon, we leaped upon our bicycles and spurted down Fifteenth street to the monument grounds. By some devious route, we came to the lonely old Bullfinch gatehouses, together with their great square stone gate-posts, upon which we gazed with affection. We were animated by the usual boyish sympathy for neglected inanimate objects, and as we had heard their story, we felt that they should never have been removed from the Capitol inclosure.

Catching our breath again, we rode up the steep, winding approach, right to the base of the Monument. There we dropped our bicycles in a heap, and Q looked at his watch. "If the hands aren't stuck," he said, "it is just exactly twelve o'clock, noon."

"Gosh! It's high from here!" Slats said, resting his ear against the marble of the Monument, and looking straight up, some five hundred and fifty-five feet, to the towering top in the clouds.

"Let's find the end of the shadow and mark the place for twelve o'clock," Q suggested.

"That's easy," I agreed. "We'll just walk around the sidewalk here; the shadow's on the other side. Then we'll ride down it, on our bikes, until we come to the sharp point of it, on the grass down the hill."

Accepting the suggestion, the Gang walked around, and continued to walk, until we came to the place from whence we started, and were amazed to find no shadow whatever. . . .

Good Will Ambassador

"Blooey! Blooey!," said Q, suddenly, placing his forefinger, as if it were a pistol, to his forehead and wriggling his second finger, as if it were on the trigger. "Bam! Bowie! I could do that to myself, and not hurt a thing! Ab-so-lute-ly no brains at all! My watch must be right; it's noon! Of course we can't find the shadow! It's all crumpled upon top of itself; so it isn't. . . ."

"That couldn't be, except at the Equator," Dick Chew declared, basing his contention on some smattering of astronomical knowledge.

Q looked at him with a blank expression of bewilderment. Then he said, "Let's come down here some other time when the sun's out." He laughed. "There isn't a shadow in town!"

None of us had noticed that it was a cloudy day; we were at an age which seldom halts to consider the tremendous part which conditions play, in determining the character of results.

Perhaps, as part of our ownership of the world, the Washington Monument was ours; avenue entrance like furies, leaping down five steps at a time, and scuttling, breathless and provoked, into the seclusion of the White House gardens. Never had we received such treatment—we, who owned the earth!

Something, we unanimously decided, must be done about this insult. Mrs. Roosevelt having gone away for a day or two, the fact suggested immediate retaliatory measures to Q with a directness amounting to genius. Under his direction, we made a quick raid on such bureaus and dressing tables as were needed to supply a hand-mirror for each of us. Returning to the side of the gardens, we took up strategic positions under trees where the sunlight filtered through the leaves, and played our shafts of light from the mirrors into the office windows of the State-War-Navy Building, all along the offending corridor.

Annoy Whole Side

Faces began to appear at the windows we were covering, while clerks emerged, seeking to ascertain the cause of the dancing spots of light which played about on the walls of their offices, on their desks, in their faces, in their eyes. Some of the window shades were pulled down, but we kept on with the mirrors, Q systematically assigning certain light batteries to rake particular groups of windows.

But, of course, it was not to be expected—the results being so satisfactorily effective—that we would confine ourselves to keep these targets; and soon we were annoying the entire easterly side of the building . . .

Presently, a military aide, gorgeous in blue, marched briskly across the garden, and we put our mirrors away. Addressing us, he came to his point in a curiously diplomatic and roundabout manner, exhibiting the greatest friendliness and a genial smile that mitigated much of what followed.

"I've just heard," he said, "that they're going to signal something from the top of the War Building . . ."

Q, and the rest of us, thrilled. Then, in a sudden burst of confidence, Quentin told the aide the story of the mirrors, the clerks' and the guide's rudeness to us. The aide evinced no surprise, contenting himself with commenting loyally, "Of course, it couldn't, possibly, have been anyone connected with the War Department . . . But look!"

Leave Mud Marks

That Quentin's comments were not always taken seriously, by either side, detracted not one whit from the importance of his function. There are Negro doormen in the State-War-Navy Building, who have grown grey sitting in their old-fashioned, cane-backed, swivel chairs, or plodding, flat-footedly, about the corridors, who remember Master Quentin with the greatest affection. All doors were thrown open to him, and at all times; no bureau-chief was ever too busy to see him. Even if the officials were "in conference," Q, nevertheless, became a part of it.

Some of the information he picked up, as to how fast and far guns would shoot, is not to be found in any of the standard works on ordnance. There was one particular gun he described as "disappearing—then, just as it completely vanishes, it is fired with a minimum of smoke. . . ."

So the marble-tiled corridors were ours, and into them, one day, a follow-your-leader tramp took us. On the way, Q had stepped, with one leg, into the south fountain, and all of us had to follow; as a consequence we had picked up considerable mud from the garden, en route. Crossing the street, we rushed up the easterly steps of the building, climbed over the anchors, set at each side of the entrance, and, in single-file, passed a doorman who knew, and favorably regarded us.

Looking back after we passed, however, we noticed that he appeared to be rather annoyed. And he had ample reason. Our shoes were still slushing fountain-water, and we were leaving muddy drip-marks on the floor.

Boys Made Indignant

Marching up the long corridor, we noticed a Negro messenger going ahead of us, poking his head through the swinging doors of offices at intervals, coming out again, and shuffling along to repeat the performance. Occasionally, he looked back at us and showed his white teeth, at which we—taking it to be an expression of good-will—grinned back.

But we speedily came to know that he was doing something quite maliciously different. He had been going ahead of us, to apprize everyone of our approach, so that, as we passed office-doors, officials and clerks came out into the corridor to see the procession. They stared and laughed, which was not polite, nor at all friendly. We resented their making fun of us, and the farther we went, the more indignant we grew.

Following Q, faster and faster, and with shoes scrunching, we came, finally, to the Pennsylvania avenue entrance. Here, as ill-fortune would have it, we met a group of visitors, accompanied by a guide.

"That's the President's son, Quentin Roosevelt—the boy in front," said the guide, in a clearly audible voice, "You can see for yourselves—from the boys he picks up to play with—how democratic he is . . ."

Gang Gets Revenge

Q halted—as did we—his face flushed with the struggle he was having to keep silent, being, like the rest of us, filled with anger. He found it impossible to speak, chiefly, no doubt, because so many words were striving to tumble out, one over the other. So he remained explosively silent, and ended by breaking into a run, with the Gang following closely behind him. We dashed out of the

CHAPTER XI.

NOW Joe Wells began to weaken.

I'm not complaining about Joe, but I'm making the point that men weaken before women in the kind of heart-breaking trouble we were in.

I figure that women would have been fine soldiers in the trenches—at least, women that were poor girls would. Better than men. Because boys get used to one kind of trouble and girls to another kind. Boys can stand getting hurt in a fight or a game or something that is fun, but it's girls that know how to stand getting hurt when it isn't any fun at all, like washing dishes and being burned, or scrubbing the floor.

Sore Feet No Bar

WHAT I mean is that, as long as it was like a game, Joe Wells could keep on going, and cooking camp meals and swimming rivers, like in a movie, but as soon as it was hopeless, and just walking on sore feet and not getting anywhere, then it was my turn to keep the men going.

So Joe sat down and said: "Let us wait for them here." One thing; he ran out of cigarets, and he figured maybe the sheriffs would give him a smoke when they arrested us.

But I said: "No, let's keep on going. They haven't got us yet. If we get in those hills, maybe we will lose them."

But he sat stock still on the ground and refused to budge and began to tell Glenn that we would be fools to keep on going. The thing that finally got Joe on his feet again wasn't my talk, but daylight coming on and showing us what looked like an army of men coming at us, back about a mile.

We started for the mountains on the run. In about an hour we began to climb. Glenn was ahead, finding places for us to crawl up.

Religion Strong

Glenn began singing "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me." He has a sweet voice. And the men behind were still on our trail.

We looked up in the sky and Glenn said: "Look, honey, isn't that a strange cloud over there?"

It was a cloud shaped like a person in a nightgown. It was over the biggest mountain.

We saw that the Indians were going twice as fast as us, to the left. Joe Wells said he could tell they were Indians because they walked bent, not straight up like white men, and they were going too fast for us.

When we got to the top of the small mountain we were on, we could see that the Indians had beat us to the valley beyond. We were surrounded.

The mountain had a square rock on top of it about the size of a kitchen cabinet. It was sunk down in the ground and had ditches around it where we could lie and escape bullets.

Bullets Fly

THE bullets began to come. You could tell they were close because they chipped the rock we were under. Then I went crazy. I wanted to kill the people who were trying to kill us. I got up and shot my gun toward where the Indians might be. We couldn't see them and they probably could see us, because a bullet came and whizzed across my neck and made a cut with a little blood. I could feel the back of my neck and look at my hand, all bloody. That licked me. I lay down.

All the time Glenn was looking at the cloud like a man and his eyes were getting big and his look frightened me.

I said: "What is it, honey?"

And he stared as if he didn't know me and pointed to the cloud.

And I looked. And it had turned into an image of Our Lord.

Glenn's lips were moving. So I prayed, too: "I give myself up, dear Lord, to you, not to the Indians. Amen."

Since we have been in jail Glenn has talked and written about our miracle, and has made me better than I was.

BIRMINGHAM, March 22.—The Sloss Sheffield Steel and Iron Company is shipping more pig iron than is being produced at present with three blast furnaces in operation. Betterments to properties are being carried forward.

LONDON BUYING AMERICAN STOCKS

British Believe Business Recovery Will Be Quicker Here; Favor Rail Issues

NEW YORK, March 22.—For the past two months, there has been foreign participation in the New York stock market, particularly in bonds and high grade industrial and railroad stocks. Advices from London indicate that certain British newspapers and stock brokers have advised the purchase of American industrial securities rather than British. General stagnation of British business and predictions that recovery will be quicker in the United States than abroad have led to these recommendations.

Foreign exchange brokers state that there is a steady flow of British funds into the local stock market and that it is a major factor in present weakness in sterling. Sterling cables are currently quoted at about $4.86¼ compared with $4.85¼ a year ago.

ABNORMAL YEAR

The past year, however, was so abnormal as to make comparisons of little value, but in middle of March, 1928, sterling cables were quoted $4.87⅞ and toward end of the month went above $4.88.

The Bankers Magazine of London shows that between January 17 and February 18, aggregate value of 365 representative securities listed on the London Stock Exchange increased in value £9,355,000 to £6,768,654,000. Those securities are divided into two classes—fixed and variable interest obligations. The former showed appreciation of £17,271,000 while latter were down £7,916,000.

RAILWAY BONDS GAIN

In the latter group, the shrinkage in value would have been far greater had it not been for five colonial railways and 11 United States railway shares which gained £10,283,000 and £38,040,000, respectively. Almost without exception, other members of the variable group declined. Principal gains in fixed interest stocks were registered by British and Indian funds, up £14,078,000 and United States railway gold bonds, up £6,265,000.

Southern Pacific Co. To Spend $7,000,000

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific Company, announced the railroad would spend $7,000,000 immediately on train equipment.

Big League Transfers. Fans to See New Faces. Ball Club's Life Short.

NATIONAL GETS MANY AMERICAN VETS

NOT all of the new faces greeting the eyes of Pittsburgh baseball fans as the various National League clubs appear at Forbes Field in the 1930 pennant race will be those of freshly developed recruits. Many of the players added to the teams in the senior loop since the close of last season are veterans who formerly served in the American League. They are new to the National circuit, but old in major league experience. The shifting of athletes between the two big girdles has been the heaviest in many years, and most of the transfers have been in the direction of the Heydler wheel, following, in some instances, short stays in the minors.

Lil Stoner

The Pirates themselves have one former American Leaguer as a new member in the person of Pitcher Lil Stoner. This right-hander hurled more than five seasons for Detroit, the same club for which Ira Flagstead and Oscar Stanage also played at one time. The greatest draw on the Barnard organization, however, has been made by Cincinnati. In addition to a former American League manager in Dan Howley, from the Browns, the Reds will present Outfielder Harry Heilmann, ex-Tiger, and Outfielder Bob Meusel, Infielder Leo Durocher and Pitcher Archie Campbell, all ex-Yankees.

FOUR of the other clubs in the parent body have added former American Leaguers to their rosters. The only exceptions are the Phillies and Cardinals. The Giants have picked up Pitcher Herb Pruett, once of the Browns; the Dodgers have engaged Pitcher Hollis Thurston, formerly of the Browns, White Sox and Senators; the Cubs are trying Pitcher Al Shealy, a Yankee discard, and the Braves have obtained First Baseman Johnny Neun, an erstwhile Tiger, and Third Baseman Russell Rollings, who did a turn with the Red Sox.

In the American League ranks are found three men, one a manager, who saw their latest big league service in the National. Heading the trio is Donie Bush, pilot of the White Sox. Bush is returning to his first love, as he was once with the Tigers and Senators, but during 1927, 1928 and part of 1929 he was leader of the Pirates. The others are Pitcher Pete Jablonowski, former Red with the Indians, and Pitcher Lee Roy Mahaffey, former Buccaneer, with the Athletics.

NEW evidence that the life of a big league ball club is short and that it doesn't take long for the major portion of a team to pass out or drift to new scenes, is found in the case of Fred Fitzsimmons, Giant pitcher.

This hurler has been with the New Yorkl club only a little more than four seasons. He appeared with the Giants here immediately after joining them in August, 1925. Yet today he is the dean of John McGraw's flinging staff.

Fred Fitzsimmons

JACK SCOTT also was a Giant pitcher in 1925, but he has been dropped and taken back a couple of times since. Only three other players who were with the club when Fitzsimmons came up are still on the payroll as active performers, though Irish Meusel has returned as a coach. They are First Baseman Bill Terry, Shortstop Travis Jackson and Third Baseman Freddie Lindstrom. All the rest have gone. They were Catchers Snyder, Gowdy and Hartley; Pitchers Nehf, Dean, Bentley, Virgil Barnes, McQuillan, Huntzinger, Baldwin, Greenfield, Winner and Davies; Infielders Frisch, Kelly and Grah, and Outfielders Young, Southworth, Wilson Meusel, Walker, Koehler and Carter.

SOME boxing promoters appear to alter their views rather suddenly when a big gate looms up in front of them. Gabe Kaufman, Kansas City showman, announced only last week that he would have nothing to do with Primo Carnera, that the giant Italian insisted on selecting his own opponents and that this would not be tolerated in Kansas City.

Kaufman charged that Carnera had refused to meet Tiny Roebuck at his club, and that somebody associated with Primo had stipulated that if the vast Venetian appeared in Kansas City he must be allowed to take on either Jack Bartlett or Dick Michelbrink, both unknown in fight circles. "No cheese opponents or divers," Kaufman declared. "He'll meet a real fighter or none at all."

THE promoter seems to have changed his mind after going to St. Louis Monday and seeing Carnera and Chuck Wiggins draw a $48,000 house. He now announces that he has matched Primo to meet George Trafton in Kansas City next Wednesday night. Trafton's chief claim to fistic fame is based on a four-round decision over Art Shires.

Joe Tinker

In connection with Monday night's affair in St. Louis, it is reported that in at least one of the country's big fight centers "wise" money was wagered during the day that Wiggins would lose in the second round. He did.

IN ALL that is said and written of Honus Wagner's greatness as a ball player, he is generally touched upon only as a shortstop and hitter. Rarely is there any reference to his base running. As a matter of fact, Honus in that department, as in all others, was one of the greatest of his own or any other time. Joe Tinker, himself a great shortstop and a star of the old champion Cubs, is one veteran who does not overlook that detail in discussing the immortal Pirate.

"WAGNER was not only the greatest shortstop of all time, but he was also one of the best base runners I ever saw," said Tinker in a fanning bee with a war correspondent at a Florida training camp. "I'll stand my ground on that. He could go from first to second base, in particular, as fast as any man I have ever seen in baseball."

Comparing Johnny Kling and Jimmy Archer as catchers, Tinker gave the decision to Kling. "John had a lot of stuff," he said. "He was not only a receiver; he was great at handling pitchers. I believe I'd put him up as the greatest ever. Archer could throw, but he wasn't the all-around general behind the bat that Kling was."

STIFF DEFENSE STOPS GLOCK QUINTET

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

GROVE CITY, Pa., March 22.—The first day of spring was the last day of grace for New Kensington High School, winner of the basketball title in the W. P. I. A. L., the hard-fighting Allegheny Valley quintet being eliminated from the P. I. A. A. title race here last night by Sharon High, champions of the Northwest and District 8 rulers. The score was 20-10. New Kensington's famous last-half rush being smothered by awkward, but powerful, Sharon attack. A crowd of 1,400 saw the contest.

The triumph for the Mercer Countians was their fourth in as many years in the duel with the W. P. I. A. L. champions, and furthermore, moved the team into the semi-finals of the state championship play. Sharon now meets Lewistown, District 5 rulers, in the semi-final round in Pittsburgh Tuesday.

KEN-HI OUTCLASSED

New Kensington was completely outclassed last night. Glock's fast-passing, quick-breaking offense being checked by the man-for-man defense relied on by Sharon, and even the clever drilling Laughlin was countermanded. Lighthorse Deems, doughty Sharon forward, checked him at every turn. New Kensington was limited to a pair of field goals, one coming in the first two minutes of play and the other in the last two.

Sharon, meanwhile, was getting the odd points. Led by Deems, who flipped four goals through the net, the Mercer County quintet counted nine times from the court. New Kensington, playing a clean game, went through the 32 minutes of action with only two fouls being called against it. Sharon was nabbed 10 times.

New Kensington led at the end of the opening period by 5 to 3, Dayoub having sunk a field goal, while McCandless counted twice from the foul line and Ames once. McCandless was the victim of as intentional a foul as I've seen all year. He broke away from Deems, dribbled under the hoop and while in the act of shooting, was struck from behind and sent tumbling into the crowd. Deems might well have been banished from the game for the overt act.

Sharon's first period points came on Deems' foul and Laycock's field goal. Deems dumped in a pair in the second period, while New Kensington was missing fire in its attack. At the half, Sharon led, 8 to 6.

Deems continued his assault in the third period, adding two more goals, and Laycock came through with his second goal. A lone foul was New Kensington's contribution to the scoring.

In the final period it appeared New Kensington was going to put on an eleventh-hour rush, Wilson scoring a field goal and a foul, but McCamant came through with a pair of timely baskets and a foul, and big Jim Murphy, Sharon's touted center, scored his first and only points with a goal from under the hoop.

M'CAMANT, SEEMS STAR

McCamant and Deems were the only outstanding players of the game. Deems is a ball hawk of the first order and his powerful physique and speed make him a valuable man. McCamant, not quite as big, but easily as fast and as good a floorman, is a crackerjack running mate.

Despite its 2-to-1 triumph, Sharon was not overly impressive. Observers who have watched the team throughout the season admitted, following the game, that Sharon was off. But then, so was New Kensington. The man-for-man defense was partially responsible for the failure of the New Kensington attack to function, and the splendid defensive work of Deems proved a very SOMEWHERE IN AN UPPER BERTH, March 22.—We are stopping here and there on our way North to pick up a little call money. The object of an exhibition tour is to show Chattanooga, Little Rock and such places to the rookies as a threat if they don't make good. YESTERDAY'S EXPLANATIONS: SHEBBATAI ZEBI MARRIED THE BIBLE—Shebbatai Zebi was the most famous of the Psuedo-Messiahs. A mystic and a charlatan, he deluded his Jewish brethren by claiming to have come "to fulfill their Messianic hopes." In order to land weight to the genuineness of his pretended mission he celebrated with great pomp the festival of his marriage to the Bible. The community of Salonika, Greece, turned out to attend the solemn ceremony. Shebbatai eventually accepted Mohammedanism to escape punishment at the hands of the Sultan of Turkey.

CHICAGO, March 22.—The victim of a rangy and powerful team which came from far behind to win in the final quarter, Duquesne University High School, of Pittsburgh, was eliminated from the National Catholic Interscholastic basketball tournament at Loyola University, here yesterday.

The Pittsburghers were defeated in a second round contest by St. Mcihaels High School of Union City, N. J., 41 to 33, after they had gone into the second half with an 11-point lead, which they later increased to 12.

BERINGER STOPPED

Beringer, whose shooting was infallible in the first round, was smothered by the big St. Michael's defense, which refused to allow him even a shot. The superiority in height with which the New Jersey team was gifted allowed it to pass through for short shots as soon as it had succeeded in keeping the Duquesne offensive sufficiently well bottled up to prevent trouble.

The teams fought the first quarter on about even terms, the margin of a single free throw separating them when St. Michael's led, 9 to 8, as the period ended.

Early in the second quarter, however, the Duquesne attack began to function in normal fashion and seven field goals and a pair of free tosses sent the Pennsylvanians far into the lead, 24 to

ROOKIE SHOWS REAL STUFF ON MOUND

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—An obscure young miner is the toast of the Pirates today—and Andy Bednar, the pitcher of Austrian parentage from the coal fields of Illinois, offers a rich object lesson to young America.

Andy skipped two or three rooms in the school of baseball yesterday afternoon as he rose to considerable fame in a Pirate uniform. On the strength of his general behavior at Paso Robles, Andy was chosen over a lot of Class A and B recruits to face the classy Seals of San Francisco. And what a scare this Class D busher threw into those Seals. Well, he's the talk of camp today and will be for days to come.

BEDNAR IMPRESSIVE

Andy had several big things to recommend him before he received the slab slip from Manager Ens. He had—

One real hook.

These four essentials brought into bold relief, as he worked four rounds against a club favored to win the Coast League pennant, have given Manager Jewel Ens food for thought. On the strength of his actions at Paso Robles, Andy has just about convinced Ens and other baseball sharps that this raw rookie would be able to hold his own if he were farmed out to Wichita or some other Class A ball club.

When Andy walked off the mound at Recreation Park yesterday afternoon, there were those who hinted that perhaps the "busher" would be held by a major league flag contender in his first real shot at the game. Every now and then some poor boy is able to achieve this wonderful result by virtue of the glories of our national pastime.

GETS BAD BREAK

PITT AND DUKES IN W. VA. MEET TONIGHT

PHILLY FIVE PLAYS BLUFF PHARMACY

Track stars of Pitt and Duquesne University today are in Morgantown, W. Va., where they will compete in the second annual West Virginia University indoor track and field championships tonight.

The Panther squad is led by Captain Pete Bowen, sprint ace. Everett Utterback, sensational Negro all-around star, and Ed Knoblock, hurdler. Joe Pesci, distance runner, heads the Duquesne delegation and will run in the mile and two-mile events. Chacko and Doggo Burns, football men, are entered in the dashes.

BIG SQUAD ON HAND

In addition to the three Panthers mentioned, Doverspike, Monheim, Vitulla, Harris, Hirshberg, Connell, McConnell, Caesar, Jerpe, Goodwin, Lamphear, Thiele and Alberts will represent Pitt.

The Duke squad, in addition to Pesci, Chacko and Burns, will consist of Nick Perrone, Reckenwald, Smythe, Murray, Hackett, Fitzgerald, Roney, Kovalcheck, Baughman, Mehl, Kemp, Ruckman and Schmittle.

PHARMACISTS PLAY

The College of Pharmacy quintet, champion of the Philadelphia City College basketball league, arrived in town yesterday and will face the Duquesne University Pharmacy five, Intra-mural champs, on the Bluff court tonight.

Last year, the Dukes defeated the Philly passers, but the team is said to have improved to a great extent over the form it exhibited a year ago. It won 10 straight league games during the past season.

JOE DONCHESS RAY MONTGOMERY JOCK SUTHERLAND ANDY GUSTAFSON SKIP GOUGLER

These men are in charge of the football destinies of the University of Pittsburgh, making up the revised staff for next fall. They were snapped at the spring workouts, now under way. Donchess and Montgomery were stars of last year's team. Gustafson is a former Panther fullback star and Gougler was a star back and field goal kicker. Sutherland, the head coach, is a former Pitt guard. Thus the local squad boasts an all-alumni coaching staff. Charley Bowser, Sutherland's chief aide for several seasons, has left to become head coach at Bowdoin College, while Alex Stevenson, long an assistant coach and scout, recently died. Gustafson, Montgomery and Donchess are the new members of the crew this year.

Facts and Fancies About Our New Bucs

NO. 16—LARMON LESLIE (LARRY) COX, OUTFIELDER.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—Texas is the largest state in the Union, but if a certain young Pirate can play ball nearly as well as his next-door neighbor, he will hear the acclaim of countless Pittsburghers at a not-too-distant date.

Larmon Cox

The vagueness of the above paragraph could be cleared up if it were written that Larmon (Larry) Cox, hard-hitting Bucco outfield rookie, and Owen Chief Wilson, another guy with the old sock, are natives of adjoining farms at Bertram, Tex.

Chief Wilson always will remain in the memory of Pittsburgh fans for two things—his faculty for hitting three-sackers and his wonderful arm. In the days of the old rocket, the Chief established a modern record for triples with 36. In contrast, and with the lively ball in play, it is noted that 20 three-sackers led last season, little Lloyd Waner being the power behind the honor.

To get back to Larmon Cox, it is well to state that he has many things in common with the veteran who is his best friend in baseball. Larry Cox, at 22, is almost the physical prototype of his hero of the diamond. Almost 6 feet tall and with a broad physique, Cox, like Wilson, owns a gun in the outfield, and he, too, is a left-handed batter who steps over the ground at a lively pace. The one spot where he is lacking, and wherein his Texas neighbor showed strength, is in fielding lofts and liners.

"But I think I have shown much improvement in the past year," explained this typical Texan, who added, "I think I was the worst fielder one could find when I got into the Texas League."

One of the longest hitters on the Pittsburgh squad, Larry can lay claim to being one of the best, if not the best, all-round athlete in camp. In his high school and college days, he was near the top among the heavyweight collegiate wrestlers; he held the state high school mark for the 440-yard dash and starred in the backfield for Southwestern College, Georgetown, Tex. And all of this besides his marked baseball skill, although he was a third baseman in college circles.

Cox will not have to give ground to Chick Hafey, Ki Cuyler and the other gunmen when he reaches the big show to stay, for he surely can rifle the ball from deep field to any base, including the home plate.

Larmon was well on his way to a degree when he left college. He started his baseball career with the Utah-Idaho League in 1927 and the following years was in the Arizona State League. Fort Worth purchased him in the fall of his second season and Larmon treated himself to a big season in 1929. Among his hits were 18 homers, 12 triples and 52 doubles.

Cox hasn't much chance to swing into action as a Pirate regular, owing to the plentitude of star fly-chasers in the Pirate squad. But if he is farmed out you may expect to see him back. His 180 pounds he carries like a lightweight fighter and when he learns more of the finer points of fielding he will be "ready." CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Sport Vignettes

When Battling Gizzy boxes Andy Andrucci in the 10-round windup in the upstairs hall of Duquesne Garden next Wednesday night they will be fighting for some sort of an Eye-talian championship . . . . Both are Italian-born . . . . Gizzy's real name is Mike Urilli and his home is in Donora . . . . Johnny Chfodo gave away 10 pounds to Mickey Duris when they boxed for the "lightweight" championship of Johnstown the other night, scaling only 127 pounds against 137 . . . . Duris won the decision . . . . They're a pair of good 'uns . . . . The Johnstown promoters sold out for the show, the gate totaling $2,390 . . . . New Castle also sold out its Jolly Bowl last Monday night for the Emmett Rocco-Al Friedman battle . . . . The Joey Goodman-Eddie Brannon fight in Duquesne Garden last Wednesday night took in $1,410 and was almost a sellout of the small quarters . . . . Motor Square Garden will do a land office business with its Jackie Rodgers-Heine Hart offering next Monday . . . . These surely are boom times for boxing in Western Pennsylvania, the best in history, proving there is nothing like competition and a lot of clubs to build up the game in any one quarter . . . . Andy Andrucci's army of rooters call him "Hutchie" or "Oochie," or something like that, when they yell encouragement to him in his battles. It must be the nickname he had as a kid . . . . Johnny Ray used to be called "Huch," and Harry Greb's moniker was "Ickey" . . . . In New York, they're referring to the new "Baumes" Law for punishing foul fighters as the "Bums'" Law . . . . Among the suggestions made to curb fouling is one from a dizzy who suggests that the fouled boxer be permitted to take a free punch at the same spot of his opponent, while the offending boxer is held in a corner by seconds . . . . Something like the penalty kick in soccer or the free throw in basketball . . . . Milt Crandall's latest wow is a turtle racing meet, which he plans to stage in Duquesne Garden, May 30 and 31 . . . . He's importing the turtles from the Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch out West, where the sport is going over big . . . . His main concern (ee-magine!) is that the folks here will take the new racket too seriously and not in the light vein in which it is intended . . . . The idea is that the customers buy the turtles at $2.75 per each and get a ticket telling the number of their mudder . . . . There wil be seven races each night, some of them on the straightaway, some in an enclosure and others on the level . . . . The first turtle over a chalk line in each event wins . . . . The big kick lies in the fact that turtles are supposed to shy at chalk marks and one of them is liable to be 'way out in front and then stop dead at the finish line and refuse to cross it . . . . Just think of the swell ballyhooey possible for the event . . . . Milt is going to have some turtle jockeys train the speed demons by exercising them up and down our best hotel lobbies for weeks before the meet . . . . And he is going to hire Johnny Black, the automobile racing demon, to do his press work . . . . Johnny is in a class by himself when it comes to writing about the knights of the roaring road and fearless drivers shaking dice with death . . . . A special dietician will be imported by the inventive Milt to cook the sort of fodder turtles are supposed to dote upon . . . . We've had Milt's dance marathons, rocking chair contests, flag pole sitters, gabbing matches and other stunts, but he says we ain't seen nothin' yet . . . . As soon as he himself learns what the turtle-racing business is all about he'll give us a load of it so the folks will become acquainted with the rules . . . . And if Traffic Engineer B. W. Marshall doesn't take that Philadelphia job, he'll be on deck to prevent jams in Milt's thoroughbred turtle classics.—HARRY KECK.

FRED BANNEROT QUALIFIES

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 22.—Fred Bannerot, Jr., of Pittsburgh, is one of the two amateur golfers participating in the concluding 36 holes of the 72-hole $15,000 La Gorce open tournament here today. The other is Jimmy West, of Atlanta, Ga.

Bannerot finished among the 65 qualifying golfers yesterday with a total of 160 strokes to his credit. He carded 40-39—79 for the second 18 holes. His first day's efforts were 42-39—81.

William Mehlhorn, competing in his first tournament for Pensacola, Fla., bounded into the lead at the completion of the first half of 36 holes. Mehlhorn set a scorching pace with a score of 140, his second round being a neat 34-35—69. It was the only card under 70 turned in during the day.

LOCALS TIRE

In the third quarter St. Michael's began to gain, and by the end of the period the score stood at 29 to 22 in Duquesne's favor, with the Pittsburghers doing little scoring and making frantic efforts to stem the tide of scores by their opponents.

Less smooth-working than the Union City five, and with the same men playing the entire game, Duquesne tired badly in the fourth quarter, and four St. Michael's field goals in quick succession sent the winners into the lead, 30 to 29, early in the period. Leoniak and Sears scored a goal apiece in a momentary rally, but the drive failed to last and the Union City marksmen were scoring almost at will in the late minutes of the contest. The lineup:

Union City—41		Duquesne—33
Godfrey	F	Bertagno
Kloppel	F	Sears
Rush	C	Wesolick
Rosenberg	G	Hayes
Harper	G	Leoniak

Score by periods:

Union City	9	4	9	19—41
Duquesne	5	16	7	5—33

Field goals—Godfrey 6, Kloppel 2, Rush 5, Rosenberg 5, Harper, Bertagno 2, Sears 4, Wesolick 4, Hayes 2, Leoniak 2. Foul goals—Union City, 7 out of 9. Duke Preps, 5 out of 8. Substitutions—Kane for Harper. Referee—Smith.

Chocolate Stops Al Ridgway; Wolgast Cops

Midget Wolgast, of Philadelphia, by taking a 15-round decision over Black Bill, of Cuba, won New York State recognition as flyweight champion of the world. He weighed 110, and Bill 109½.

THE TIPOFF

A capacity crowd was jammed into Grove City's gymnasium for last night's game. Ticket scalpers reaped a harvest, single tickets for the contest selling as high as $10 apiece.

For a game as important as last night's struggle, the contest was exceptionally listless and raggedly played. Those who paid big prices to get through the single ticket lines at least have given a ball for a souvenir.

The New Kensington rooting section, the majority of which has watched the Gloriamen come from behind three times to win out in the W. P. I. A. tournament, did not give up hope until the very last third, but their cheering could not shake itself and keep scoring. The spirit was there, but not the strokes. Mr. Dreese, of Sharon, was not willing.

In the heat of the battle, Dreese, open scoring of Mr. Candless in the first period, pointing can be excused, but the Sharon forward should have been taught a lesson. McCandless broke through Sharon's defense in a very pretty fashion, and was under the basket when Dreese, coming down the floor at top speed, bit him.

Dreese never had a chance to stop the shot, and had to grabbed him by the seat of the trousers or shirt and simply pulled him down, he would have accomplished the same purpose as his crashing into the unsuspecting Kensington kid, namely, breaking up the shot.

Robert E. Thorn, athletic director at Grove City, was in complete charge of the game and handled the big crowd in splendid fashion. There was no jamming at the entrance, state police having stationed at the outer door of the gym and keeping out all those without tickets. The police were conspicuous in the extreme.

There are few high school teams as rugged and tough as Sharon. With an average weight of each member of the starting Sharon quintet is close to six feet in height and correspondingly heavy. Dreese makes up in build what he lacks in height.

The receipts of last night's game were split three ways with Sharon, paying New Kensington's expenses here. New Kensington was given a block of 250 seats, which went in less than half an hour. Sharon sold its quota

M'TIERNAN BEATS PIAI

BUCK IS HANDY WINNER IN COMEBACK

By HARRY KECK

Buck McTiernan, former welterweight, of Swissvale, but now a middleweight, came back to the ring last night after an absence since his knockout by Mickey Solmen last December and handed Johnny Piai, of Greenville, Pa., a drubbing in a 10-round main bout in the Moose Temple.

Buck McTiernan

The issue never was in doubt, Piai, a rough and and tough fellow, winning only one round, the fifth, in which he nailed Buck several times with both hands.

McTiernan plainly showed that he needed this bout under his belt. He started off cautiously, moving about a lot and being slow to lead, as if uncertain of himself. As he got the feel of the ring again, however, he began to warm up to his work and improved as he went along. In the last five rounds he swarmed all over his opponent and several times appeared to have him ready for a finishing punch. He wrought most of his havoc on the body of his foe, who winced with pain as Buck's right crashed home and a few times complained of low punches when hit on the line of his trunks.

FANS "RIDE" BUCK

A goodly portion of the crowd was "on" McTiernan throughout and booed him at the finish because they thought he was taking unfair advantage of Piai when he stepped in quickly following clinches and clipped Johnny with straight, clean punches. Piai helped along this sentiment by repeatedly appealing to the referee to make Buck step back, when, as a matter of fact, it was he who was doing the holding and leaning and refusing to break clean. He got the sympathy of the crowd, but took a pasting for his slovenly work in this department. Both men are supposed to protect themselves on the breakway from clinches and both are supposed to step back, but not necessarily a city block, as the crowd was encouraged by Piai's actions to believe.

There were no knockdowns in the bout. McTiernan went down off balance at the end of the second round and Piai was wrestled down in a clinch at the end of the eighth, but both were up immediately. Piai's left ear was badly puffed and finally bled from his opponent's punches and he showed the effects of the body beating as well.

McTiernan weighed 162½ pounds and Piai 161¾ at 3 p. m.

DELUCA BEATS ROBERTS

Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville, 148 pounds, won his second decision over Hans Roberts, of Brookline, 145, in the six-round semi-final. Roberts held his own in the early rounds, but was bleeding badly from the mouth and was outboxed and outpunched in the last three.

Billy Scholes, of the North Side, 132, repeated his victory of two weeks ago over Peaches Gallagher, of Swissvale, 132½, in the second bout, the most keenly contested of the night. Scholes again proved too strong for Peaches, who, however, boxed better than in their first meeting. The judges agreed on Scholes, but Gallagher carried the referee's award, which did not count under the circumstances.

BALINT LOSES TO LANZ

Paul Balint, of the North Side, 125¼, weakened after a rousing start in the final round of the six-round opening bout with Frankie Lanz, of Sharpsburg, 125¼, and blew the referee's decision after having held a big edge in the early rounds, Judge Frank Perris agreed with the referee, Eddie Kennedy, who handled all of the bouts, while Judge Frank Brown voted for Balint, who, for being all in at the finish, really retained a bit of his early margain.

The crowd was only fair. Bill Schuster was the announcer and Chappie Couch the timer.

HEINE HART

Allentown (Pa.,) bantamweight, who boxes Jackie Rodgers in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night. He arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday and worked out at Flynn's gym in the afternoon.

Castle, in the windup there next Friday night.

Franklin Young, Detroit Negro flyweight who lost a bout with Willie Davies in the Moose ring next week because of an eye injury suffered by Davies in 10 bouts, and will remain here to train for a match with Steve Rocco at Toronto, Canada, a week from next Monday night. The Young and Davies bout will be listed for a later date.

Phil Goldstein, local lightweight, arrived back in town Thursday from Miami, Fla., where he witnessed the Phil Scott-Jack Sharkey bout and enjoyed a vacation, and left last night for a stay of a few days in Cleveland, after which he will return here and go into training for ring work. He scales 148 pounds, which is from 10 to 15 pounds over his fighting weight.

The Motor Square Club is trying to match Tony Gaudiosi with a good opponent for one week from next Monday night, the Joe Trippe-Vincent Hambright fight scheduled for that date being cut on two counts, Trippe having injured his side in training and Hambright receiving a drubbing from Billy Angelo in Cincinnati a few nights ago. Tony Herrera has declined to box Gaudiosi here.

The National Police Gazette Sporting Annual for 1930 is just off the press. It is the first appearance of the record book since 1912, when publication was suspended. It contains records of boxers and stars of other lines of sport.

The show at Duquesne Garden next Wednesday night will be a double windup affair, Ray Collins, of Erie, and Johnny Smarkey, of Canonsburg, having been matched for the five 10-rounder. Battling Casey and Abie Andriotti are on top. Kid Hargraves will box in the second bout.

California Joe Gans, of McKeesport, boxes Steve Halkko in a 10-round main bout at Rochester, N. Y., Monday night.

THREE SOCCER TILTS TODAY

Two soccer games will be played in the Pittsburgh District League this afternoon; the Lewis S. C. will meet the Pierpoint Motors at the Homewood playgrounds, and, while it is possible for anything to happen in soccer, it hardly seems possible for Lewis S. C. to extend the Motors aggregation. Pierpoint should clinch the championship.

The Heidelberg Eagles meet the Celtic A. C. at Leslie Park. Nothing depends on the outcome, but it will be worth while watching. Clan Douglas plays Union Switch in another game.

Tomorrow the fans will trek to Thoms Run to watch the O'Donnell benefit game, which will find Heidelberg doing its stuff against the Chartiers Valley club.

VINCE DUNDEE BOWS

Between Rounds

Both Jackie Rodgers and Heine Hart worked out here yesterday for their bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night. Hart is Flynn's gym and Rodgers in his own quarters on the North Side. Jackie got he's ahead of schedule from Chicago.

Jackie Wilson, formerly of Jersey City, and now of the North Side, who has thrilled Moose Temple fans in several bouts, will box Mickey Solomen, of New Castle, in the windup there next Friday night.

school to take over the gridiron coaching reins. The boys usually ride him about the lowly position of the Red Sox in the American League pennant race, and take great delight in chalking up Charley's batting average, if any, on the dressing room walls.

Last year, when Berry walked into the gym, Marcus Rankin, the team captain, stepped up, and, putting out his hand very solemnly, cracked in this manner: "Congratulations, coach, on that hit you finally got on August 10—it was a pip."

Kid Williams

TWO more fistic stars of the past, one born too soon to profit by the opportunity for huge earnings offered to the boxers of the present day, and the other too free with money when he had it, are reported in failing health and destitute circumstances. They are Bobby Dobbs, old Negro lightweight, and Kid Williams, former bantamweight champion. Dobbs, 61, is fighting probably his last fight in the tubercular ward of one of New York's hospitals for the poor, on Welfare Island. Williams, who earned much more than Dobbs but failed to save any part of the fortune he won with his fists, is so broken in health and finances at the age of 37 that a benefit show is to be held for him in his home city of Baltimore on April 7.

BEDNAR STARS, BUCS WIN

rounds against the Seals and threw them back runless on two hits. The Pirates won the opening encoutner with the Seals partly on the slab work of the humble miner and partly on account of the de luxe pitching of Ervin Brame, coupled with the clever play of the Pittsburghers. The score was 4 to 1.

Bednar walked to the mound at the start of the sixth, and in an instant was the victim of a tough break. He made Slugger Eddie Coleman pull a roller to Gus Suhr, but Gus' toss to Bednar, who covered first, was hard to handle, and Andy had his foot off the bag as he nailed the rocket. Was he ruffled by this little twist? Not for a moment. He turned back Red Wingo, Earl Sheely and Lory Baker in quick succession, and then held to his clip for the remainder of the contest.

SECOND GAME TODAY

Andy fanned Slugger Coleman and Sheely in the eighth. His vaunted control was on display and the way he worked his hook and fast ball on these good hitters was sufficient to tickle the cockles of Jewel Ens' heart—not to mention Chick Frazer's. Chick bought Andy for a song from McCook of the Nebraska State League.

Perhaps it would not be the right caper to hold Andy this year in view of his scant experience, but as Umpire Ted McGraw remarked at the finish of the game, "You can bet all the tea in China that he will make a pitcher."

The Pirates reached Old Friend Jimmy Zinn for three tallies in the fourth round to salt away the contest. Brame was too clever for the Seals as he reeled off five innings.

The second game of the series is on for this afternoon. Lil Stoner and Ralph Erickson will twirl for the Pirates.

Away back, centuries ago, philosophers used to argue at great length as to whether or not a chicken upon being hatched instinctively scratched or whether the mother had to teach the chicken how to scratch. The argument finally was broken up by the intrusion of a lowbrow who suggested that they might watch an egg hatch and see what happened.

Knute Rockne.

It may seem funny to read an article on antiques by a steamfitter or an article on early Italian Renaissance art by a truck driver, but no more amusing than reading an article on how detrimental athletics are to the college men, written by some flat-chested chap who never took part in athletics.

As to the question of whether or not college athletics are detrimental to the individual college man, I would suggest that this be answered by the college alumni who took part in athletics in undergraduate days. Their answer would be truthful, being based on actual experience, and might have a little real bearing on the question.

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., March 22. — Washington Irving, of Clarksburg, will meet Williamson, the only Southern Division team left in the West Virginia scholastic court series, in the semi-final game of the upper bracket, while Elkins, now the favorite to take the 1930 playoff, will meet Hundred. In the semi-finals are three Northern Division teams and one Southern representative, the field having been narrowed down from nine from each division.

As it now stands, Washington Irving, of Clarksburg, is slated to defeat Williamson, and Elkins should have little trouble from the Century quintet from Hundred. If the title game is played between Washington Irving and Elkins, it will be the first meeting of the year between these two closely situated teams.

The largest crowd that ever attended a state tournament in Buckhannon, during its 17 years of existence, was present last evening. It was estimated that more than 6,000 fans filled the West Virginia Wesleyan College gymnasium. A larger attendance is expected for the final tonight. Yesterday's lineups:

Montgomery—20. Hundred—30.
Hackworth, F, Bartrug
Allen, F, Kidd
Crouse, C, Hunt
Poff, G, Keller

Musical Story of "We."

James P. Dunn's "We," considered the most successful musical interpretation of Col. Charles Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic flight, will be played by a symphony orchestra directed by Walter Damrosch. Although many writers have been inspired by the tonal possibilities of Lindbergh's trip, Dunn's work has been most enthusiastically received. "We" begins with a musical phrase that suggests the tuning up of the motor. The flight over the sea and the turbulent play of the waves and elements form the second part of the tone poem. The end is a stirring evasion of triumph as the plane and its pilot sweep down to Le Bourget landing field at Paris. Here the composer has blended "Yankee Doodle" and the "Marseillaise" in a chorus of wild jubilation as both nations thunder their homage to the young aviator.

Floyd Gibbons will give another of his talks on "Adventure in Science."

George Ade's comedy, "The Mayor and the Manicure," will be dramatized. The scene is laid in a mayor's office. Just before his son's arrival home from college, a girl seeks an appointment to tell him that his son has thrown her over after making love to her and agreeing to marry her.

The mayor senses a blackmail plot and sets out to investigate and solve the problem by methods that he has learned through his participation in politics.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

THE hum of Lindy's plane as he took off on his trans-Atlantic flight, the swishing of turbulent waves which came near engulfing his monoplane and the excited joy at Le Bourget field in Paris when he landed in Yankee triumph will be depicted by Walter Damrosch's Orchestra in the General Electric Hour on WCAE at 9 o'clock tonight.

Damrosch will play the score of James P. Dunn's "We," admittedly the best musical interpretation of Col. Lindbergh's feat. The composition closes with a stirring brass arrangement of "Yankee Doodle" and "La Marseillaise" blended together.

When the curtain rises on the Miniature Theater, KDKA at 10:30, the Radio Players will present George Ade's comedy, "The Mayor and the Manicure."

Lou Little, coach of the Columbit football team, will be interviewed by Ted Husing on the 6:30 Sportslants over WJAS.

Capt. Bob Bartlett, who was Peary's skipper on the explorer's North Pole Expedition in 1909, and who now is with a sealing fleet in the ice off Greenland, will receive encouraging messages from KDKA at 11 o'clock. The pioneer will broadcast to Bartlett and his crew every Saturday night on the regular wave and on the experimental bands of 25 and 48 meters.

HARMONICA HARRY

"My name's Harry. I want an audition," said a queerly dressed individual who roamed into the KDKA studios yesterday. Somehow the impression got about that Harry wanted to become an announcer, so he was turned over to Fred Rodgers. Fred, always busy, forgot to ask Harry about his ambition. Into the studio they went and Harry read for 10 minutes from a prepared manuscript. Fred listened, told the aspirant that he would write him in a few days about his announcerial possibilities.

"But don't you want to hear me play the harmonica?" queried Harry, sort of repusted-like, as they neared the door.

STUDIO PLAYBOY

A playboy at one of the downtown studios posed as manager of the station one day when a would-be voice of the air applied for a position. In a dignified manner the playboy took the applicant into the studio, placed him under a microphone with a book in his hand and told him to read until told to stop. The playboy said he was going outside to hear how the voice registered. Then he disappeared. The coming announcer had read 16 pages of dry literature before an operator had the heart to ask him what it was all about.

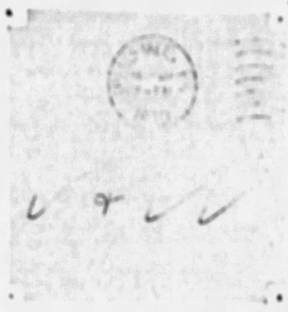
EFFICIENT POSTMEN



Going through the KDKA mail yesterday Marion Catlin discovered a letter without any address simply bearing a "check and doublecheck" as shown in the photograph. It was for Amos and Andy from Josephine Urik, of 641 Remaley avenue, Springdale.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 15c, 30c, 60c.

Admiral von Tirpitz's Warnings to Imperial German War Lords

WHY America's opposition to U-boat warfare brought about the ultimate defeat of Germany, and how he warned the imperial German war lords that delay or modification in a ruthless submarine campaign against Britain would prevent German victory before the United States entered the Great Conflict are told in a notable series of articles by Grand Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz.

These articles, probably the last he wrote before his recent death, are of unusually timely interest because of the present controversy over submarines at the London Naval Conference.

Admiral Von Tirpitz's First Article Will Appear Exclusively in Tomorrow's Sunday

DAILY TRUE STORY

"Cupid at Bat"

"WHAT I want to do," Dave Hatton told Polly French, "is to buy the old Simpson place adjoining here, modernize the house and put in houses and runs for eight or ten thousand hens."

"That would be lovely, Dave. When are you going to do it?"

Dave sighed.

"It will take me four years, and what I'm afraid of most is that you won't wait for me."

Polly didn't say a word.

"I suppose four years seems a long time, Polly?" he said, putting it in the form of a question.

"It is a long while, Dave," Polly murmured.

"By saving every spare penny I can buy the Simpson place in four years, and I'm afraid it may be sold before then. It's part of an estate and must be sold for cash."

"If you could get it now—"

"I can't, Polly—but four years won't seem very long. We can be making plans. I'll have enough then to not only pay for the place, but the ten thousand chicks, build the houses and runs and rebuild the Simpson house just whatever way you want it."

"But four years——" Polly spoke rather despairingly.

"I love you so much, Polly. I'd wait any time for you."

"If somebody buys the Simpson place before then?"

"I'll save and buy some other place—we'll be on Easy street within a few years after we're married."

They said a lot more. Lovers usually do, and it is generally uninteresting to anyone except the lovers.

Engagement Bluer

However, Dave Hatton was somewhat discouraged. He couldn't make Polly French promise absolutely to wait the four years. Nor would she agree to accept a ring and be formally engaged.

They had been sort of informally engaged for a year. At least they had acknowledged their love for each other and looked forward to the day when they could marry.

Bert Dennett might win Polly. He had been crazy about her ever since their school days and Bert had inherited his father's furniture store in the town. Now and then he took Polly to places and, of course, since Dave and Polly weren't actually engaged, he couldn't object even if he wanted to. He expected Polly to run around and have a good time.

Dave Hatton had bought three acres and built a tiny bungalow. He had a thousand hens. He lived alone and made a good profit on his little place but he wanted a place ten times as big. Then he could afford to provide for Polly in the right way. If he married as he was it would take all his profits to live and even a thousand of the best hens will lay only so many eggs—he'd never get ahead.

Dave supplied the Widow Watson with eggs, and she, in turn, sent her boy Johnny over with fresh-baked bread daily, and now and then a hot apple pie for good measure. Dave got his own meals and managed quite well, only it did upset him to know that he could sell 10 times as many eggs, broilers and fowl on every trip if only he had them.

He tried to lease the Simpson place, but the executors would not give more than a year's lease—they might have a chance to sell. Dave couldn't risk building houses and runs and have to tear them down in a year and move them away.

Relative No Help

Dave's two uncles lived there.

Dave was independent. He wouldn't have asked them for help or a loan if they could have accommodated him, but they couldn't have done that very well.

Uncle Dave—young Dave was named for him—had been cobbling shoes in Plainstead for half a century. He lived in a little cottage that adjoined his brother's place.

Uncle John was a carpenter, a steady worker and just tolerably prosperous enough to get along. He had a couple of married daughters and a single daughter at home with his wife. He was a most religious man.

"I don't see how John ever come to be a good carpenter," Uncle Dave used to say, "'cause a carpenter is bound to smack his thumb now and then when hailin'; and if a man can't cuss good and plenty when he does that he's just sunk!"

It was a standing joke between the older and the younger Dave. Old Uncle Dave—he was past 60—would occasionally "smack" his own thumb at his cobbler's bench. He could relieve himself plenty in the way of "cussing."

Uncle John didn't quite approve of his brother Dave because Dave "desecrated" the Sabbath by remaining from church and singing ballads.

Uncle Dave was a pretty good "fiddler." He never claimed to be a violinist. But he could "saw out" tunes such as "Steamboat Bill," "Georgia Buck," "Hoe dem Taters" and all the other old ballads with a twins and verve that was amazing and delightful to those that could appreciate that sort of melody.

To the surprise of young Dave and to the disgust of Dave's Uncle John, old Dave brought home an apparatus to plug into the light socket and he could talk in a horn and make records for his phonograph.

Three times old Dave had been away for two or three days. People smile when he said it was "on business."

Secretly Made Happy

They would have been amazed if they had known that Uncle Dave had been paid a goodly amount of money in cash because he wouldn't mess with royalties for recording for a big concern many of his ballads.

He had also been presented with a phonograph and a recording apparatus.

This was after the war. Uncle Dave invested in Liberty Bonds and kept his mouth shut about it.

It was a little more than a year after Dave had begged Polly French to wait four years for him that he began to worry.

Dave called every day when he drove in to Plainstead to make his deliveries. He left eggs and broilers for his beloved uncle and when the old man became worse, and Uncle John's wife complained that she couldn't take care of Dave night and day, young Dave sent the Widow Watson in to care for the old man nights.

"You an' me, Davie," the old man said, "is th' only sort of human folks in our family. We always knowed enough to get what fun there was out of life."

Young Dave, being decidedly human and normal, half hoped the old man had left him the cottage and house lot—he could sell them for enough to cut down his wait by a year in the matter of buying the Simpson place, and with only two years to go surely Polly French would wait.

But old Dave evidently thought that his brother needed what little he had more than his young nephew. He left the cottage and house-lot to his brother, John.

"He can turn on and hear me fiddle and sing and sort of always remember me," was a line in the will.

Dave stored the fiddle and the recording contrapition in the cubbyhole that served for an attic in his bungalow. To little Johnnie Watson he gave the graphophone. There were a score of records. He gave those to the boy also.

Message From the Dead

A few days later Mrs. Watson came down to Dave's place as he was working in his incubator shed.

She seemed excited. "I want you should come home and listen to something, Dave Hatton—the minnit I heard it I took the record away from Johnny—it's private—it sort of makes me shudder because it's a message from your dead Uncle Dave—"

"Nonsense," Dave interrupted.

Mrs. Watson insisted that Dave listen to the whole record all alone, as it seemed to be private to Dave.

"This is a private message to my nephew, Dave Hatton. If anybody else hears it I want they should stop it right here and send for Dave—remember this is a message from an old man now dead—"

There was a pause, the record revolved for a moment.

"Davy—you was always like me. I made a lot of money with my ballads—canned ballads they are now—but John being so pious wouldn't want money made from the wicked ballads. Inside of that contraption that I talked and sung and fiddled into to make records I have put $24,000 in Liberty bonds. They are for you. Don't make nobody sore by ever telling. Have a good time with it—I don't believe God ever intended us to go round with long faces."

That was about all. Dave took the record and ran home.

He got down the apparatus and opened it up.

The Liberty bonds were there!

You wouldn't know the old Simpson place now, with its 10,000 hens, stuccoed house and Mrs. Polly French Hatton helping Dave keep books, while four workmen take care of the poultry!

HE HAS LOTS OF NERVE, TOO, TO WALK IN HERE AND TELL A BIG FIB ABOUT LOSING ALL HIS MONEY. I'LL NEVER FORGET HOW YOU LOOKED THAT DAY — A SORT OF ASH-COLOR.
ANYBODY ELSE WOULD LOOK THE SAME WAY IF THEY THOUGHT THEY WERE KISSING A MILLION OR SO GOODBYE.
I'D NEVER CARE MUCH FOR HIM AFTER THAT AFFAIR, EVEN IF HE HAD FIFTY MILLION DOLLARS.
WELL IT NEVER DOES ANY HARM TO BE BROAD-MINDED ABOUT SUCH THINGS, ESPECIALLY IF YOU'RE AN HEIR.
WHEN I PUT HIM ON THE TRAIN HE THREW ONE ARM OVER MY SHOULDER AND TALKED ABOUT HIS WILL. AND HOW WELL OFF I'D BE LATER ON IF ANYTHING TERRIBLE HAPPENED.

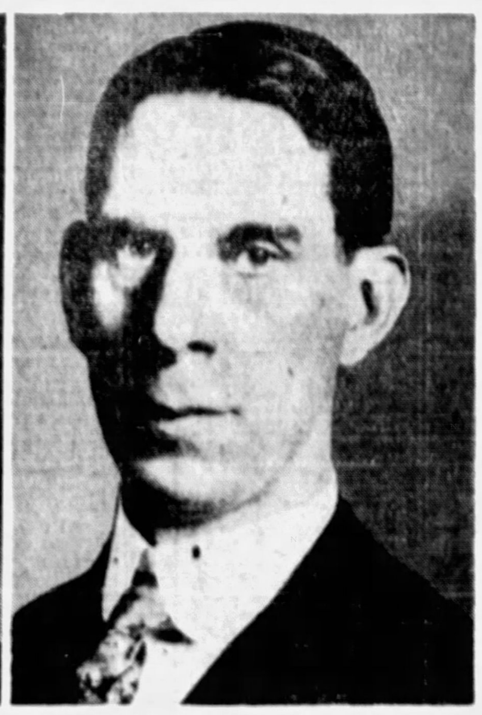
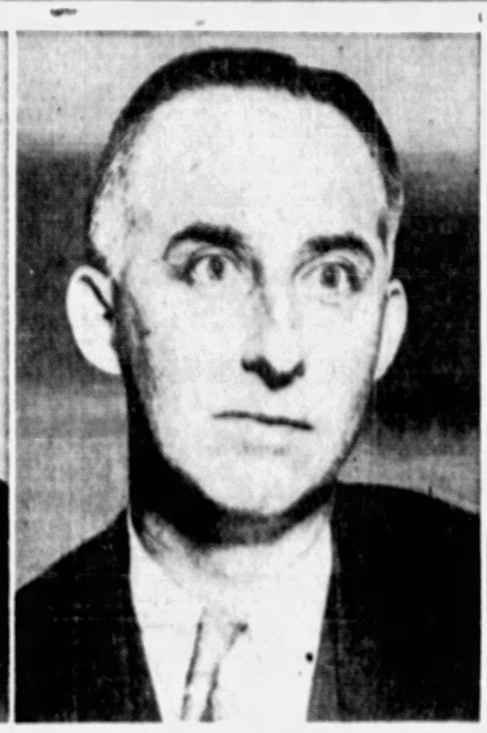
FIVE REASONS WHY THE POWER TRUST IS NOT WORRYING

PATRICK J. HURLEY, Secretary of War—One of the three members of President Hoover's cabinet who are merely dummies on the Federal Power Commission, holding 30-minute meetings once a month and leaving the business of regulating the trust to a secretary, Frank E. Bonner.



DR. RAY LYMAN WILBUR, Secretary of the Interior— Another cabinet dummy on the power commission. The Baltimore Sun complains that Secretary Wilbur is trying to pay the campaign obligations of the administration by turning the power of the Boulder Dam over to the Southern California Utility Company.

ARTHUR M. HYDE, Secretary of Agriculture— The third cabinet dummy on the power commission, devoting 30 minutes a month to the work of the power commission. Senator Couzens proposes to create a full time power commission, confirmed by the Senate, instead of straw men under power trust influence selected from the cabinet.



FRANK E. BONNER, Secretary of the Federal Power Commission— He appeared before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and charged that there had been "persecution" of the power companies. Senator Norris, in the Senate exclaimed that "Bonner is absolutely unfit for the position and is in reality an attorney for the power trust."

PAUL M. DOWNING, vice-president and general manager of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company— He recommended the appointment of Bonner to Secretary of the Interior Wilbur and Secretary Wilbur appointed Bonner on the recommendation of his "old college mate." So the Pacific Gas and Electric Company and other units of the power trust are being regulated by the appointee whom Mr. Downing had the foresight to recommend.

Power Commission Dummies From President's Cabinet Permit Wholesale Plunder of Public by Power Trust

NOW American citizens know why they pay six or eight or ten cents per kilowatt hour for their electric current, while up in Ontario citizens buy it for two cents.

If we don't know, it's our own fault for not reading the interesting news that comes out of Washington on the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the power trust.

The commission has just finished with its first subject, the American Gas and Electric Company, a large but by no means the largest of our holding companies.

What the commission has found and proved is a foretaste of what it will prove when it spills the facts concerning the holding company that boosts YOUR electric light bills.

The American Gas and Electric pumped $66,000,000 of water into the capital of the Appalachian Power Company when it formed that concern to head a merger of utility companies in the South.

And of course nothing was done about it by any of the solemn-faced state public service commissions, supposed to "regulate" the capital and rates of electricity companies.

The American Gas and Electric makes every year a profit of 68 to 100% on its holdings in this power company. Its profits on its investments in the Scranton Electric Company run from 37 to 48% a year.

That's business.

The few honest state regulating commissions are powerless to control these great holding companies that sprawl all over the country. The Federal Power Commission consists of three dummies from the President's cabinet who hold thirty-minute meetings once a month and leave the business of "regulating" the trust to a secretary, F. E. Bonner.

Bonner was appointed by Secretary of the Interior Wilbur on the recommendation of Wilbur's "old college mate," Paul M. Downing, vice president and general manager of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

Bonner appeared before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and charged there had been "persecution" of the power companies, including the Niagara Falls Power Company. The Federal Trade Commission has shown that this company tried to saddle $91,000,000 of watered stock on the consumers of its current, unhampered by any protest from the Federal Power Commission.

During his campaign for the presidency, Mr. Hoover had the almost solid support of the utility interests of the country. It is only natural that President Hoover, the winner, should be graciously disposed to the utility interests. To be otherwise, would seem to smack of ingratitude. It may remain true that Secretary Wilbur, sliding along that slippery phrase "public interest" can obtain legal sanction for turning the power of Boulder Dam over to the Southern California Utility Company. Thus he can make a substantial payment on account for the support given to Mr. Hoover by the utilities in his campaign. (Editorial in Baltimore Sun, February 1, 1930).

No wonder that Norris in the Senate exclaimed that "Bonner is absolutely unfit for the position and is in reality an attorney for the power trust."

The scandal reaches high and wide if not handsome in the administration. Senator Couzens has introduced a bill to stop the theft of public power sites and of public money. It creates a real full-time Federal Power Commission, confirmed by the Senate, instead of straw men under power trust influence selected from the cabinet.

This commission will have control of the security issues and rates of the big interstate companies; but if the regulation is honest, it will also bring down the price of corresponding electric current distributed wholly within states. The state commissions will be shamed into action.

The new commission should also be instructed to compile authoritative reports on comparative charges for domestic, commercial and industrial electricity by private plants and by public-owned plants — for example, those in Los Angeles, Seattle, Tacoma, Springfield, Ill., Cleveland and Toronto, along with the commission's conclusions as to WHY the rates are cheaper in one of these groups than in the other.

The Hydro Electric Power concern of Ontario, public-owned, sells current for two cents because it is satisfied with making no profit above the five per cent on its investment necessary to pay interest on its bonds.

It would be difficult for even the most "efficient" private management to make the American Gas and Electric meet Hydro's rates and yet pay a return on a volume of stock which, the Federal Trade Commission found, is inflated to twenty times the company's investment.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 22.—A distinct change has come to the personnel of the first night theatrical audience in New York. For years it was as standardized as the seventh inning stretch. The same bored regulars drifted down aisles to the same pews night after night.

Today about the only constant regulars are first run critics and the aged and dapper corset manufacturer invariably in his aisle seat in the first row. Dyed-in-the-wool play devotees now wait for a show to be ironed out and become "set." They are fed up with annoying asininities.

The initial performance developed into a parade ground for show-offs who not only wanted to be seen but heard. They seemed to imagine that a patient audience came to see them and what they were wearing instead of the play.

Despite advertised warnings of prompt curtains, a first night continues to be from 20 minutes to a half hour late. I have attended innumerable openings where not more than a dozen would be seated, despite the agonizing wait when the curtain was lifted.

Instead they would be in a huddle back of the rail indulging a gabble so noisy that often players would be forced to halt in their lines until silence was restored. All during the first act they would saunter to seats, whispering and waving at acquaintances.

There was, too, invariably a sprinkling of those ermine-coated chatter-boxes who pop out of their seats at intervals to gallop up and down the aisle greeting this new arrival and that. It was the worst mannered crowd one encountered in a city of bad manners.

At intermissions the same confusions were repeated. Almost the entire audience moved out to promenade in the lobby and on the sidewalk. The curtain time bell was completely ignored and again they filtered back while players struggled for attention. And most of them are admitted on passes.

An excellent first night rebuke was administered by Keats Speed some years ago. He was seated behind two garrulous ladies, chatting almost out loud. Mr. Speed leaned over and observed in his soft Southern accents: "I'm sorry ladies but they are making so much noise on the stage I cannot hear you." And the looks he got!

I like the frankness of the friend of mine who broke a luncheon engagement with a lady with this telegram: "Can't see you today. Lie will follow."

New York lushers are turning to moonshine in preference to dubious Scotch and cut rye. It is becoming a staple drink in hush huts at lower tariff. A moonshine highball is 50 cents to the 75 cent and $1 charges for the faked products. Bootleggers buy the moonshine from Southern states for $15 a gallon. The sudden popularity is due to hunters from the city discovering they could consume moonshine without the customary headache that went with the local poison.

No Robots For Thinking Jobs

By Herbert Kaufman

A ROBOT wouldn't be reaching out for your pay envelope if you WEREN'T doing a job which an automaton can manage with greater exactness and at a lower cost.

And folk who haven't never aspired to accomplish anything that a robot can't as SATISFACTORILY handle, must in time be driven to more INTELLIGENT occupation.

We buy such labor, just as we purchase equivalent equipment. And dividend necessity will always give preference to the machine, human or mechanical, which operates fastest and with fewest errors.

YOUR age has no bearing upon your wage. Business is solely concerned with earning power. If your ideas are still sound and original, expediency will retain you.

Commerce is an opportunist and a free thinker—Progress refuses to be hampered by orthodoxies. Yesterday's rules are as unsafe as yesterday's fools.

Promotion by seniority is a generally abandoned practice. Experience repudiated that unsound procedure when we substituted motors for mules, and typewriters for calligraphers.

Compensation judges what a man DOES, not what he WAS. We ceaselessly infuse new blood into our manufacturing and sales systems, not so much that we lack faith in veterans, but because they so often lose faith in THEMSELVES.

The dollar struggle is too stern for such expensive, bankrupting sentimentality. We can't withstand competition from WITHOUT, if we don't encourage it WITHIN.

The law of survival was laid down by Nature long before man took it up. Displacement, by force of merit, is universal.

You were paid in FULL for services rendered. From the outset, you demanded the largest salary your worth could secure. As you became more proficient, wherever and whenever you could press personal advantage, you seized the chance and immediately claimed your due. At every propitious moment, you held out for the full market value of increased utility.

CONSEQUENTLY, we are mutually freed of obligation. The score was cleaned week by week. You insisted upon your pound of till-flesh. In fair weather and foul—through depression, panic and deficit.

Now, when you place less on YOUR side of the scales, you must expect to RECEIVE less from ours.

If your outlook had remained up-to-date, there'd be nothing to remind us of the date of your birth.

But if you cease to collect pollens and absorb suggestions—if you close your eyes to innovation and disregard changing techniques—if you don't conserve vitality and receptibility—if you keep riffling the discard instead of drawing new cards—if you're guided by past information instead of present inspiration—if you've concluded that you're too old to LEARN, then you're manifestly too old to EARN.

We can't hope to win MODERN battles with ANCIENT strategy.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE—By H. G. WELLS

In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells

THE soft mud, now pressed hard, reveals to us the outlines of jelly fish, annelid worms, with their appendages and bristles, small crustacea, with all their soft leaf-like appendages, even the outlines of their stomachs, and arrow-worms, just like those that swim in our modern seas, with their transparent fins.

Walcott has also found swarms of bacteria from still earlier rocks.

H. G. Wells

It is doubtful whether this is to be considered the most extraordinary case of fossilization; it is certainly rivaled by some Palaeozoic (III) fishes (to be seen in New York) which have been so delicately petrified that thin slices of their muscles ground down to transparency, and looked at under a high power of the microscope, show the cross-sections of the muscle fibers as clearly as a fresh-made preparation from a modern dog-fish.

How the microscopic structure of living tissue came to be thus transplanted into stone we do not fully understand; but at least the rarity of such lucky finds brings home to us the multiplicity of what is lost forever.

There are those which lead to gaps and imperfections in the fossil record, whether through the fewness of animals and plants which became fossilized, the washing away of large sections of the crust when brought above water, for wind, rain and frost to destroy, or the destruction of fossils by the heat and pressure of metamorphosis.

And there are those which make it difficult to arrange what fossils we have in the right order, whether the difficulty sorings from the turning of layers topsy-turvy and from faulting, or from the fact that two contemporaneous layers might show quite different fossils either because they were laid down in quite different situations, or because, though comparable in the environment they provide, they were situated far apart on the earth's surface.

The imperfection of the record is unfortunate, but nothing more. It makes the labors of fossil hunters greater, and should warn us against clamoring for the immediate discovery of this or that "missing link."

But patience and the exploration of more and more of the earth's surface are bringing their own reward.

Every year the record becomes less scrappy, and in many groups of animals, what 50 years ago seemed impossible to hope for has been achieved and an unbroken series discovered, leading through ages of time from simple to highly-developed types. The difficulty is not one of principle.

But the other difficulty seems at first sight more serious and the opponents of Evolution, anxious to find any stick to beat a dog with, have tried to make out that it is a defect of principle.

The Evolutionist, they say, pretends that he dates his fossils by the order of the rocklayers in which they are found; but in reality he very often dates his rock-layers by the fossils he found in them—when, for instance, they are distorted in mountains, or when only a single fossil-bearing layer can be found, or when new quarters of the globe are explored for fossils; and this, they claim, is arguing in a vicious circle.

He first of all examines the earth's crust in some region like the southeastern half of England, or the Bad Lands of Wyoming, where the strata lie plainly one above the other and are not crumpled or distorted. He collects series of fossils from as many as possible of such undisturbed layers, examines them, determines to what group they belong, and whether there exist any others of exactly the same species from other layers.

By so doing he can provide for each main layer and for each kind of deposit—sandstone, shale, clay, or limestone—with each main layer, a list of fossil species which are not found in any other layers, and of others which are especially abundant in the layer, or very scarce or absent therein.

It is only after he has thus dated his fossils by reference to an undisturbed succession of deposits that he uses them to help him in dating layers whose age cannot be determined by these straight-forward methods.
